CONFESSION BY BANK WRECKER

The Boston American prints the complete confession of Frank L. Taylor, president of the Warren National Bank, who was arrested in Chicago on a charge of embezzling $213,000 of the bank's funds.

Taylor, who was traced to Chicago through his baggage by Burns detectives, makes a clean breast of his connection with the looting of the bank.

He declared, however, that he was merely the tool of another man, Joseph B. Marcino, alias Biatia, who paid him $50 a week to be the president.

Marcino, whose banking operations are said to have left a trail of wrecked institutions all over the country, carried off all the cash and securities of the Warren bank, according to the remarkable revelation of Taylor.

Taylor claims he fled in fear of the consequences of his master's doings and not because he had any loot in his possession. Abe Goldman, Marcino's father-in-law, was also a victim, says Taylor. Both men have disappeared.

Taylor's story, when lodged in the Chicago detective bureau, was Wallingfordesque in detail. He pictured Marcino as a financial genius, gone wrong. He declared that the man, having immigrated to this country from his peasant home in Milan, Italy, had set forth to "corner" the financial and insurance business of the United States.

Ambition His Undoing

"His lust for wealth and fame was his own undoing," the banker said. "It led him beyond the pale of the law, and once there he could never regain his honest footing."

Marcino, boasting only of the education which his trip in steerage from Milan to this country gave him, first appeared in Chicago four years ago. He was a barber on South Halsted street and through ministration of good shaves, according to Taylor, made the acquaintance of several wealthy Italian merchants of the district.

He supplemented his adroit brush with a dazzling word picture of the wealth he one day would pile up and finally interested two of his customers in his "day dreams." They financed him in a venture which, through his prodigious mental acumen, netted him the vice-presidency of the old Atlas Bank in Chicago.

It was in this capacity, three years ago, that he first met Abe Goldman, wealthy manager of the Furniture Exposition Exchange, or rather met one of Goldman's daughters. She invited him to the Goldman home at No. 143 Wrightwood avenue, and a few months later he married another of the Goldman daughters.

SLUGGERS ROB MAN IN SOUTH END

Lured to House, Is Knocked Senseless; Left in Road at Forest Hills

The notorious South End gang of sluggers are active again. It appears that they have temporarily, at least, abandoned the use of a pretty woman as a lure, which, on two occasions recently, ended disastrously for them, and are now employing the promise of securing "good booze" as bait for their victims.

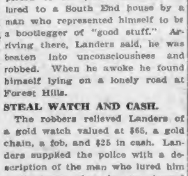

Clifton B. Landers of Athol reported to the police that he was lured to a South End house by a man who represented himself to be a bootlegger of "good stuff." Arriving there, Landers said, he was beaten into unconsciousness and robbed. When he awoke he found himself lying on a lonely road at Forest Hills.

STEAL WATCH AND CASH.

The robbers relieved Landers of a gold watch valued at $65, a gold chain, a fob, and $25 in cash. Landers supplied the police with a description of the man who lured him to the house where he was slugged and the number of his watch. These are expected to lead to the apprehension of the robbers.

According to Landers' story, he was walking along Washington

8,000 Tons of Coal Sunk by Ice in New York Harbor

New York, Feb. 22.—Thousands of tons of domestic anthracite, billed to Long Island and Bronx dealers, are tied up and 8,000 tons have been sunk by the ice floating in the North and East Rivers and down the harbor, the State Fuel Administration announced.

As a result of this situation, dealers in Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx now have less coal in their yards than at any time this Winter.

FEARED FLAG WAS HOLDUP, HITS TRUCK

Motorman Frank Brodbine was injured when his car crashed into a motor truck stalled on the tracks in Essex street, Swampscott. The truck carried no tail light, according to the police.

Leonard Gibney, of Oak street, Salem, driver of the truck, rushed back and waved a flag at the motorman, who thought a holdup was being attempted. The crash caved in the front of the car vestibule. Six passengers were shaken up.

LEGION WARNS OF FAKE VETERANS

Don't be taken in by fakirs posing as war veterans! This warning was sounded by William H. Doyle, department commander of the State branch of the American Legion. He says the State is overrun by bogus heroes who prey on public sympathy. Disabled war veterans are being cared for by the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, Commander Doyle declared.

ANATHYLAXIS HITS CREAM PUFF EATERS

Providence, Feb. 22.—F. N. Strickland, chemist for the food and drug commission, reported on the case of fifty-two persons made ill after eating cream puffs and eclairs bought in Natick bakeries. He finds they did not have ptomaine poisoning but did have anathylaxis induced by "hyper-susceptibility."

QUITS JAIL TO BECOME FINANCIER

Former Engineer, Confessed Polygamist, Now Heads Inter-State Drug Company

From railroad fireman, engineer, railroad shop worker, self-confessed polygamist for which he was jailed, to president of a projected drug corporation incorporated at $1,000,000.

This is the amazing story of Robert Roscoe Jefferson Murray, president of the Inter-State Drug Company with offices at No. 185 Devonshire street, Boston.

In 1917 Murray was an inmate of the Middlesex County House of Correction. Today he sits in a mahogany swivel chair at the head of a corporation that proposes to undertake wholesale dealing in drugs, at least to sell stock in such an undertaking.

WORKS ON RAILROAD.

The story of Murray's life reads like a fairy tale. Born some forty-three years ago in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Murray came to the "States" at an early age with no money. He drifted into the railroad game and 1904 found him firing a locomotive on the Boston & Maine Railroad. He graduated from a fireman to a railroad engineer.

He married pretty Rosanna Brine, of Halifax, Nova Scotia. His charming wife bore him three children: Robert, Evelyn and Harold. It was a happy little home that Murray and his wife occupied at No. 20 Walnut street, Somerville. Murray was earning good money as an engineer and the family prospered.

Then came disaster.

Murray, according to his wife, was bouncing his little baby, Harold, on his knee one day. The child tugged at a letter sticking out of Murray's pocket and asked "What's dat, Daddy?"

WIFE INVESTIGATES

Murray turned pale. His wife searched his clothes that night and found letters, she claimed, from eight women. Her heart was broken. She investigated, and in May, 1916,

PAWTUCKET GIRL INJURED BY AUTO

Pawtucket, R. I., Feb. 22.—Evelyn Stibeck of No. 50 Gerald street, this city, was severely injured when struck by an automobile in Pawtucket avenue. George T. Gilkenson, driver of the car, told the police that the girl stepped from the rear of a trolley car and that he could not avoid the accident. Miss Stibeck was taken to the Memorial Hospital.

FIRM PAID BUT HOLDS UP COAL

Cambridge Concern Accepts Cash Jan. 17; Order Still Undelivered

Charles L. Mooney lives at No. 67 Trull street, Somerville. On January 17 last his wife went to Wellington & Buck Coal Company of East Cambridge and ordered a ton of coal.

The clerk said: "We haven't got any coal right now, but there'll be some coming in soon. The way to assure yourself of getting the coal is to pay for it in advance."

Mrs. Mooney paid $16.50 for a ton of coal and got a receipt. The clerk promised to have the coal delivered within forty-eight hours, in consideration of the advance payment.

Two days later the coal had not arrived. On January 19 Mrs. Mooney telephoned the coal company and asked about her ton of coal.

MORE PROMISES.

"Congratulations, Mrs. Mooney," the clerk said. "You're right on top of the list. Your coal will be over as soon as one of the trucks comes back. You're a lucky woman."

Mr. Mooney came home from work that night, and was told how lucky he was. He went to a store and paid an exorbitant price for a 25-pound bag that contained slate.

THROWN FROM ENGINE

Daniel Madden, 31 years old, of No. 470 Medford street Charlestown, an engineer, is dying at the City Hospital of injuries suffered when he was thrown from his engine by a sudden spring of a lever on the locomotive. He suffered fractured ribs and internal injuries.

TAYLOR TELLS HOW MONEY WAS TAKEN FROM WARREN BANK

RECEIVED BUT $50 PER WEEK AS TOOL OF ALLEGED ARCH PLOTTER MARCINO

With finances supplied by Goldman and other Chicago men, he achieved another financial coup in acquiring control of the Bison Holding Company of Buffalo, a concern which held control of the Niagara Insurance Company.

And it was at this time that Taylor said he entered Marcino's scope of action.

MEETS MARCINO.

"I met Marcino through Herman H. Soren, an attorney, with offices at No. 166 West Jackson Boulevard," Taylor said. "I had formerly been the manager of the Universal Stores Chain here, and later of the Rochdale Stores, which was a branch of Harrison Parker's co-operative society. But with the bankruptcy proceedings launched against the society, I was then out of a job.

"Marcino, polished in speech and manner—he had traveled far within the few short years since his departure from Milan—liked me immediately. He promised to make me wealthy with him. And, surely, a few months later, when he went to the Buffalo offices of the Bison Company to become its president, he called me there to be general manager.

HAD AMAZING DREAM.

"Prospects looked bright. The Niagara Insurance Company held policies amounting to more than $10,000,000 and was rapidly growing. Thus the Bison Company, its holding agent, was headed for unlimited advances. It was at the height of these good times that Marcino unfolded to me the dream which has now lead him to flee the country, perhaps, and me to this jail cell."

Briefly, Taylor's outline of the dream was this:

Marcino planned to make the Niagara Company the greatest insurance institution in the world. He plannned to open huge deposits for it in banks throughout the country, and through these gradually gain control of the banks themselves.

"His first step," Taylor continued, "was to take $200,000 of the insurance company's funds and deposit them in the Merchants and Mechanics' Bank of Philadelphia. In this and other similar manipulations he did not use his own name. He subscribed himself as Edward J. Goldman; also as Joseph B. Biatia.

WARREN PLOT PUZZLES.

"Having established this bank as the Philadelphia repository of the Niagara, he moved on into New York and opened negotiations with the Metropolitan Trust Company there.

"On the strength of his Philadelphia bank account, he was enabled to borrow $150,000 from the Metropolitan and thus establish it as the New York repository of the Niagara."

Taylor is puzzled as to why Marcino took a financial jump downward so great as from New York to the small town of Warren, Mass.

"I advised against the move," he said. "But Marcino pointed to the wealthy countryside and declared he would penetrate to 'the furtherest points of the United States' to make his power felt.

"He bought the First National in Warren for $42,000, paying $32,000 in cash and giving his note for the balance. That was last December; and he wired me at Buffalo immediately to come on and become its president.

GAVE HIM $50 A WEEK.

"He offered me only $50 a week salary to start with, but painted such a glowing picture of myself, standing beside him as the foremost financial factors of the world, sooner or later, that I consented. I understood later that he had obtained the $32,000 from Mr. Goldman, his father-in-law, in Chicago.

"The First National was a prospering bank. It was capitalized at $50,000 and had deposits aggregating $300,000. I foresaw prosperity for myself with its growth, and really began to believe in Marcino's dreams.

"But I did not say that his loan from the Metropolitan Trust Company in New York was due January 22 of this year, and that he had no funds with which to meet the loan. You see, he had re-deposited the money in the bank, immediately it had been loaned him, in order to establish Niagara, but in order to maintain the insurance company's standing with the bank it was necessary for him to meet the loan.

"Marcino appeared in the First National's banking rooms a few days before the loan was due. The key to the vaults wherein were stored the general deposits was in my personal desk. I saw him take the key and open the vaults.

"Then I saw him emerge with a grip, apparently heavily laden, relock the vault, toss the key back into its drawer and disappear. That was the last that I ever saw of Marcino."

Taylor claims he did not realize that Marcino had actually looted the bank until last week. Then Examiner Hadley appeared and, as a precautionary move, he says he started to take an inventory of the vaults holdings.

MARCINO IN MEXICO.

"When I found that not even a promissory note had been left by Marcino for the thousands he took, I knew the bank had been wrecked. There was nothing for me to do but flee.

"But I did not intend to escape justice. I merely came to Chicago to seek aid of Mr. Goldman."

Goldman could not be found at his Wrightwood avenue home. But Marcino's wife and four young children were there, sobbing piteously at their plight. They admitted they had heard from the alleged absconder, at some small town on the Texas border. It is believed he is in Mexico.

Marcino Caused Loss of $40,000 in Bank at California

New York, Feb. 22.—Joseph B. Marcino, alias Biatia, Goldman and Moffere, formerly lived in Chicago and came East about a year ago. According to N. B. Hadley, chief examiner of the New York State Insurance Commission, Marcino was responsible for irregular transactions in two California banks. While in control of the Bank of Perris, California, the institution lost about $40,000. He also headed the Niagara Life Insurance Company of Buffalo and the Mechanics and Merchants' Bank of Philadelphia. The first company closed because of mismanagement, while the latter institution fell short $130,000 and failed.

Taylor's "Boss" Wrecked Many Banks

New York, Feb. 22.—When Joseph B. Biatia, alias Marcino, alias Moffere, expert juggler in high finance, dropped the First National Bank of Warren, Mass., from his hand the institution closed its doors with a shortage of $218,000, thereby joining the wrecks that Biatia's amazing career has left behind.

Biatia, who formerly lived in Chicago, was responsible for irregular transactions in two banks in California, according to Chief Examiner Hadley of the New York State insurance commission, and according to records of the Burns Detective Agency.

He came East a year ago and subsequently obtained control of the Niagara Life Insurance Company of Buffalo and the Mechanics and Merchants' Bank of Philadelphia.

BIATIA VANISHES.

The insurance company, an old but comparatively small concern, was taken over by the insurance commissioner February 14., because "gross mismanagement." The Philadelphia bank failed last week with a shortage of $130,000. The Warren bank was acquired by Biatia through dummy shareholders a few weeks ago, according to Mr. Hadley, and was used by him in irregular operations that were connected with both the insurance company and the Philadelphia bank.

As a result of the crisis in the lives of these three Biatia institutions Frank L. Taylor, president of the Warren bank and a director of the Niagara Life Insurance Company, is under arrest, charged with embezzlement, and Biatia has disappeared.

Although Biatia has profited largely through manipulation of the institution, according to the insurance commissioner, no charge has been made against him for the reason that he was not an officer of any of them, having operated them through officers of his choosing.

Although the mysterious Biatia's full history does not appear to be known by the State insurance officials, his entry into the Niagara Company last May was the signal for vigilance on their part, Mr. Hadley said.

"On May 15, last, Biatia, or Marcino, as he is more generally known, bought the Bison Holding Company which owned 964½ of the 1,500 shares of Niagara Life Insurance Company stock," he explained.

USED DUMMY DIRECTORS.

"He paid $25,000 cash and borrowed $125,000 from a New York bank, securing it with stock of the insurance company. One of his first moves was to replace officers and directors of the company with men of his own selection. One of these men was Frank L. Taylor.

"Last Winter Biatia bought control of the Mechanics & Merchants Bank in Philadelphia, a small institution with $37,500 capital stock and $3,500 surplus. It began business last December 26. On January 1 this bank had $25,414 deposits, of which $25,000 was in funds of the Niagara Life Insurance Company. Subsequently deposits there by the Niagara Life Insurance Company brought the bank's deposits to $210,000.

"The loan from the New York bank was due January 22. On January 20 Biatia borrowed $130,000 from his Philadelphia bank, giving twenty-six notes secured by stock of the insurance company. The names signed to these notes were names of persons who did not exist.

SEEN LAST WEEK.

"We learned of the transaction between the insurance company and the Philadelphia bank and I went to Philadelphia to investigate. When the Pennsylvania State Banking Department learned Biatia's notes were spurious they conferred with him.

"He promised to make the notes good. In the meantime, Taylor, who was connected with the Niagara Company, disappeared from Buffalo and showed up in Warren to become the president of the First National Bank. One day last week Marcino was seen in Philadelphia, and I learned he was plentifully supplied with cash. He was to meet the bank examiners the next day and make good the $130,000. We have not seen nor heard of him since."

Under the name of Moffere, according to the Burns agency, Biatia bought control of the bank of Perris, Cal., in 1917, and when the institution left his hands it had lost about $40,000. In the same year he bought stock of the Harbor City Savings Bank of San Pedro, Cal.

The State bank examiners advised the other stockholders to buy Biatia's stock back, which they did at a profit of $8,500 for him. At other times he bought of banks at Ottawa, Ill., and other mid-western cities.

The State insurance officials took over the Niagara Insurance Company when it found Biatia had caused large blocks of its securities to be sold. They are operating the company and expect that policy holders will not suffer loss. Although established in 1869, under the name Bankers Insurance Company, the concern has only about $9,000,000 of insurance outstanding. It has no connection with the Niagara Fire Insurance Company.

A conference regarding the affairs of the company and Biatia's operations was held in Buffalo between Vincent Creighton of the Department of Justice, Fred M. Healy of the Burns agency, and C. C. Fowler of the State insurance department. They refused to tell what passed at the meeting, but it was intimated they were seeking to get in touch with Biatia, Frank L. Taylor and R. M. Taylor, Jr., who was treasurer of the company.

Taylor, Twice Wed in Hub, Well Known in State

Frank L. Taylor, president of the First National Bank of Warren, who was arrested in Chicago on a charge of embezzling $213,000 of the bank's funds, is well known in Boston, Randolph and western Massachusetts communities as a railroad fireman, detective, promoter, bond salesman and church worker.

Taylor was a fireman for the Boston & Albany Railroad on a regular run between Springfield and Boston, from 1904 to 1907. Weighing not more than 130 pounds and being only five feet four inches in height, he is recalled today as "Pewee" Taylor. He was an efficient worker and was made a spare engineer in 1907, but left the railroad a few years later.

FIRST WIFE, HUB GIRL.

The bank president is twice married. His first wife was a South Boston girl and in 1908 he is believed to have divorced her on evidence he obtained from detectives while he was away from home on trips. Their son, Earl, now about eighteen years old, is said to be attending school in Chicago.

Reports of the date of Taylor's divorce are seemingly contradicted, however, by his residence with a wife in the town of Randolph from 1912 to 1918. While in Randolph, Taylor was an active member of the Tower Hill Methodist Episcopal Chapel, serving at one time as secretary pro tem. He made frequent long trips from the town.

Taylor told residents of Randolph that he had been a locomotive fireman. Boston & Albany firemen declare he was well-liked and held an office in their organization. Significantly enough he enjoyed the nickname of "Smooth" as well as "Peewee," and his former companions were not surprised to learn that he had become a bank president.

Taylor moved to Talbot avenue, Dorchester, about 1918. It was here that he met the girl who is now his wife. He was then manager of a chain store and sold stocks and bonds.

WEDS AGAIN IN HUB.

His present wife was Julia Howarth of Oak Park, Ill., who came to Worcester after the death of her father in 1915 to live with an aunt and cousin. She attended Worcester Classical High School for two years and then obtained employment in Boston.

Mrs. Taylor No. 2 says she is twenty-three years old and declares that her husband is forty. After their marriage she says they moved to Buffalo, where he engaged in the insurance business, later as a stock and bond salesman and chain store manager in Chicago.

Then Taylor appears as treasurer of the Niagara Life Insurance Company at Buffalo and next as the president of the Warren Bank—at a salary of $50 weekly, according to his confession.

"He Failed at Everything," Mrs. Taylor Sobs

Worcester, Feb. 22.—Mrs. Frank L. Taylor, wife of the president of the wrecked Warren National Bank of Warren, sobbed pitifully when told of the arrest of her husband in Chicago. She is living in a local hotel.

"Sonny boy and I were sure everything was all right," she declared. "This whole affair is killing me.

"He has been a good husband to me, but he has been a failure in everything he has tried. I was sure that he came into a wonderful opportunity at Warren. I know nothing of what they say has happened."

Telegrams from Taylor to his wife led to his capture. They were sent from Chicago in code, which was deciphered by the Burns Agency detectives on the case.

WIFE WAS IN BANK.

Mrs. Taylor, who is twenty-three years old, was seen going into the bank on Sunday night last. Her husband is believed to have fled Warren on the Friday night previous.

She was in the bank for several minutes and then joined two persons who were waiting outside in an automobile. The trio drove away, and she was located Tuesday in this city by Department of Justice operatives.

Her two companions on her arrival in Worcester were Miss Ethel Casey, a classmate when she attended Worcester Classical High School in 1915 and 1916 on coming here from Chicago, and Ralph Sawyer.

Miss Casey, who is a cashier in a Front street market, said she was called by Mrs. Taylor on Sunday, being told that the latter was in trouble.

During the time Taylor was in Warren his wife passed much of her time in the bank. They first lived in a hotel at West Warren, and both made the trip to Warren by railroad each day.

One week ago Wednesday last the pair moved to the home of Mrs. D. L. K. Hathaway of Winthrop terrace, Warren, where they were given rooms as an accommodation.

Neither were apparently bored by the rural quiet of Warren. They spent their evenings quietly at home.

CAUGHT IN OFFICE.

Both dined occasionally at the restaurant of H. H. Shumway, who quoted Taylor as telling him:

"My first wife was happy and contented with the job I then had but my present wife is a sport and willing to take a chance."

Mrs. Taylor was apprehended in Worcester when she appeared at a telegraph office to claim a telegram from her husband. She was taken to a local hotel and grilled for hours by detectives who were finally convinced that she was unaware of the whereabouts of her husband.

Coming from Warren, Mrs. Taylor lodged in a hotel on Sunday night. She then moved to a rooming house at No. 45 Chatham street, but transferred her lodging to a hotel after being apprehended.

FIRM PAID ON JAN. 17, COAL UNDELIVERED

chalk, rock, brick, pig iron and a trace of coal.

On January 28 the coal had not arrived. Mrs. Mooney again telephoned.

"I was just going to telephone you, Mrs. Mooney," the clerk said. "You are in luck, really. Your coal is here. It'll be delivered to you the first thing in the morning. I congratulate you on your good fortune."

Mr. Mooney returned that night with the ingredients of a healthy grouch. This was dissipated, however, by the good news his wife told him.

STILL MORE PROMISES.

"The coal's coming in the morning, sure," Mrs. Mooney said. "None of our neighbors have any. We're lucky, the clerk said."

Mr. Mooney let his supper grow cold while he fared forth again for a 25-pound bag of ashes, cinders, cement, paving blocks and other refuse masquerading as fuel.

The coal failed to come. During the next week Mrs. Mooney made innumerable telephone calls, and was informed each time that she was indeed a lucky woman—her coal would arrive in the morning. Tomorrow was the refrain of the amiable clerk—always tomorrow. And Mr. Mooney made innumerable trips and brought back innumerable bags jocosely labeled coal.

About the third week Mr. Mooney began to doubt his good fortune. When the fourth week came and there was no ton of coal from Wellington & Buck, he began to get hot under the collar.

35 DAYS, STILL WAITING.

Yesterday, one month and four days after the date that Mrs. Mooney had paid for her ton of coal, Mooney paid a visit to the office of Wellington & Buck. The amiable clerk informed him that there was no coal available at the moment.

Mooney said:

"You've been telling that to me and my wife for over a month now. You've been promising delivery of that coal day after day. When you took that $16.50 from my wife you were taking money under false pretenses. When you promised delivery of that coal day after day without any intention of delivering it, you were lying. Now I'm sick of that sort of business. I want my coal that I paid for a month ago and I want it now."

The clerk lost all his amiability like magic.

"You can't go bulling around here," he said. "Who do you think you are?"

"Just a plain blanked fool, I guess." Mooney said. "Otherwise I'd take that coal away from you with a gun. I have a right to protect myself from being robbed. I want to talk to somebody in this firm—some responsible officer of the firm."

So he was given the great privilege of talking with E. H. Wellington, president of the company. Mr. Wellington did not even make an effort to be civil.

"You can't dictate to us," the great man said. "You're not the only one who wants coal. Keep your shirt on."

Mr. Mooney was forced to be content with this advice. He has kept his shirt on.

All of which is respectfully submitted to James J. Phelan, State Fuel Administrator, who leaves Saturday for an ocean voyage on a steam-heated liner.

Eighth Clothes Line Fatal to Man in Five-Story Fall

New York, Feb. 22.—After falling five stories from a roof and breaking seven successive clothes lines, Michael Hacker, fifty-four years old, a janitor, caught on the eighth clothes line.

For several minutes he hung there. Frantic women held blankets beneath him. Others ran for assistance. Still others, on the first floor of the building, tried to pull him to the window ledge.

Then the frayed hemp gave way. He fell the last eighteen feet and died.

Cox Approves Phelan as Coal Getter

Governor Cox has come to the defence of the State Fuel Administrator James J. Phelan, who is going on an ocean trip with the coal emergency at its most acute stage.

The Governor approves of Mr. Phelan's going, the reason for which, he says, is the illness of a member of the family of the fuel administrator.

Mr. Phelan's administration is given high praise in the Governor's statement, which follows:

REGRETS CRITICISM.

"It is a matter of deep regret that Mr. James J. Phelan, Emergency Fuel Administrator, should be publicly criticized for going to Palm Beach at this time. He is not going to Palm Beach, or indeed to any part of Florida, but because of the illness of a member of his family, is to take a short ocean trip.

"His going has my entire approval. I appreciate the devotion with which he has discharged the duties of a most difficult position during the past seven months. When last August Mr. Phelan reluctantly took over Mr. Storrow's work as fuel administrator, he gave up his vacation plans and has been constantly at the State House ever since.

"In view of the large salaries which some other States are paying to officials to deal with the coal emergency, we are fortunate in the Massachusetts spirit which prompts our leaders of business to undertake public service as a matter solely of public duty and without compensation. We all owe such public spirited citizens the duty of fair treatment.

STATE "WELL GUARDED."

"In the short absence of Mr. Phelan the interests of the Commonwealth will be well safeguarded by the State-wide organization of men and women which has been built up by Mr. Phelan during the Winter, with headquarters at the State House, which has given and will continue to give loyal service.

"B. Preston Clark, who served in the fuel administration with James J. Storrow during the war, as well as in the food administration and the Massachusetts Public Safety Committee, has acted as Mr. Phelan's assistant during the past Fall and Winter.

"He will have direct charge of the State Fuel Administration during Mr. Phelan's absence, and is thoroughly competent to do so."

"Out of 6,000 tons of coal and 2,100 tons of coke, we have about 700 tons of coal and 1,000 tons of coke. We are ready to supply our citizens as long as the supply lasts and will be ready Friday morning to supply all demands."

This statement was issued by Mayor James M. Curley. He continued:

"Despite the statement issued from Washington to the effect that there has been no suffering or distress due to lack of coal, I am thoroughly aware of what Boston citizens have passed through during this Winter and know that coal is not even now coming into Boston or the State fast enough to prevent acute suffering for some weeks yet. As long as our supply holds out citizens may come to room 24, City Hall, and have their needs supplied or they may go to the stations named below and get fuel."

JOINT CONTROL OF RUHR COAL PROPOSED

By Universal Service.

London, Feb. 22.—A proposal that the Ruhr coal fields be internationalized until the German reparations debt is paid was made in a statement issued in the lobby of the House of Commons by the four labor members of the House, Wheatley, Maxton, Kirkwood and Stephen, who have just returned from the Ruhr.

"The coal would be distributed to the markets of the world and the dividends would be distributed proportionately as set by the reparations treaty. Germany's dividend would be a political independence and freedom from occupation," the statement said.

"If the Allies, at the outset, fixed a reasonable sum for reparations, Germany would be given an incentive to work for the liquidation of the debt and the restoration to Germany of the Ruhr coal fields.

"France would have its national safety guaranteed by this international control and the whole world would benefit in the sense of security that would be created by this settlement.

"War is probable if our merely negative policy continues. And with a view to preventing such a catastrophe we think constructive steps should be taken immediately."

SLUGGERS ROB ATHOL MAN

street, South End, when he was approached by a man who asked him if he wanted to buy some liquor, which he characterized as "good stuff." Landers replied in the affirmative and the man instructed him to follow him.

HIT OVER HEAD.

The unsuspecting victim was then led to a house which is believed to be a rendezvous for crooks and to have figured in several recent robberies. No sooner had he entered the house, Landers said, than he heard someone approach from behind and strike him over the head with a blunt instrument. He knew no more, he said, until he awoke later to find himself lying by the roadside at Forest Hills.

How he was conveyed to the spot where he was abandoned is a mystery to both Landers and the police. The latter believe the victim was taken to the Forest Hills road in an automobile.

Landers made his way to the police station and reported the affair. He told the police he was unable to lead them to the house where he was slugged and robbed, being unfamiliar with that section of the South End.

AUSONIA STOPS TO HONOR DEAD

In tribute to a British shipbuilder who died crossing the Atlantic recently, the Cunard Line steamship Ausonia was stopped at the spot which the ship's log showed was the exact latitude and longitude where the body was given to its ocean grave. A wreath was cast into the water and a bugler sounded taps.

The Ausonia arrived in Boston from Liverpool and Halifax with seventy-nine cabin and 137 third class passengers. Heavy fields of drift ice were reported off Halifax.

First in War
Learn From Tutankhamen
To Destroy Germany
A New Dreadnaught

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THIS IS George Washington's birthday, and concerning that fine old Englishman, who became such a first class American, these facts are worth emphasizing.

He was a fighter, from first to last, from his early fights with boys in his neighborhood, to his readiness to fight France when he was past sixty, if fighting should be necessary.

Ready for any fight, here in the United States, he was determined to keep the United States out of the complications of Europe. His attitude toward the old country was: "Do as you please with each other, that is not my affair, but touch me, and you will get an answer."

WISE MEN are learning many things from that tomb of Tutankhamen. The young Pharaoh it seems was only eighteen years old. To philosophers of his day it must have seemed stupid waste to bury with the royal lad's body so many precious works of art, so much gold. Men of that day could not guess that the tomb of the boy Pharaoh would be an education for human beings that would fly to Egypt through the air, and travel over the sands, carried by gasoline instead of camels.

PROFESSOR NEWBERRY of the Royal Anthropological Society tells you the meaning of the "Feast of Heb Sed."

At that happy feast the Egyptian Pharaoh got rid of his first crop of wives and took a new lot. The priests that bossed things on the Nile, ancient custom and his courtiers, all agreed that a Pharaoh should get rid of his wives, when they got too old to have children, and get in a new, young crop, that his family might increase.

THE girls were married young, between 12 and 14 years of age. It was figured that 30 years later their hopes of maternity were gone, they were all politely dismissed, and a new lot taken.

The law compelled the Pharaoh to marry a royal princess, or his title to the throne would be worthless. Consequently the Pharaohs, in their second assortment of wives, frequently took their own daughters, and in the first instalment they often married their own sisters.

Cleopatra, so close to our own, at the tail end of Egypt's history, would have lived and died married to her own brother if she hadn't been a "new woman." She went off on her own accord to find Caesar, who was the father of her son, afterwards Caesarion, afterwards killed. Then she took up with Anthony and died of snake bite. Better than being married to her own brother anyhow.

This ancient feast, "Heb Sed," helps to explain the downfall of Egypt. In-breeding ruins men as it does dogs, and other animals.

Religion which forbids it is wise.

ENGLAND is worried about French plans in Germany and thinks the idea is to dismember Germany. There is, of course, no other idea. It isn't that the French don't want Germany to live, but they don't like to think of what the future Germany, with a hundred million inhabitants, might do to France. The only hope for France is in destroying Germany.

England, it is said, will refer the French Ruhr enterprise to the League of Nations. That will again prove that the League of Nations doesn't amount to anything. It is made up of France and England, the others don't count. England can't afford a quarrel with France and won't have one—unless Lloyd George comes back to power. He seems inclined to take definite action.

MEANWHILE, in one way the English are going ahead determinedly, and the United States ought to copy them.

The surface of the ocean is the battleground no longer. When you have mercantile ships you must have battleships to accompany them, as you send out a nurse with the baby. But, for real fighting, only the air counts.

England is an island no longer, or rather all countries are islands and are "open to attack from above."

The British have constructed what is well called "an aerial dreadnaught seaplane." It has watertight bulkheads like a battleship, is lighted by electricity, has sleeping quarters for five men, carries five machine guns and torpedoes. Britain can manufacture 250 such flying monsters for half the cost of one battleship. Imagine what a fleet of two or three thousand such machines would mean in the next war.

Such a fleet could destroy Paris or London within a few hours of war's declaration.

That fact makes the European nations careful. It ought to make this nation thoughtful.

Before sending away your pateient, you must tell him that he carries within him the instrument by which he can cure himself, and that you are, as it were, only a professor teaching him to use this instrument, and that he must help you in your task. Thus, every morning before rising, and every night on getting into bed, he must shut his eyes and in thought transport himself into your presence, and then repeat twenty times consecutively in a monotonous voice, counting by means of a string with twenty knots in it, this little phrase:

"EVERY DAY, IN EVERY RESPECT, I AM GETTING BETTER AND BETTER." In his mind he should emphasize the words "in every respect" which applies to every need, mental or physical. This general suggestion is more efficacious than special ones.

Thus it is easy to realize the part played by the giver of the suggestions. He is not a master who gives orders, but a friend, a guide, who leads the patient step by step on the road to health. As all the suggestions are given in the interest of the patient, the unconscious of the latter asks nothing better than to assimilate them and transform them into autosuggestions. When this has been done, the cure is obtained more or less rapidly according to circumstances.

This method gives absolutely marvelous results, and it is easy to understand why. Indeed, by following out my advice, it is impossible to fail, except with the two classes of persons mentioned above, who fortunately represent barely 3 per cent. of the whole. If, however, you try to put your subjects to sleep right away, without the explanations and preliminary suggestions and to transform them into autosuggestions you cannot and will not succeed except with peculiarly sensitive subjects, and these are rare. Everybody may become so by training, but very few are so sufficiently without the preliminary instruction that I recommend, which can be done in a few minutes.

CLIP HANDY BAG COUPON AND AVOID RUSH

Bags, Bags, Bags.

Heaps of 'em. Piles of 'em. Miles of 'em even if they were stretched end on end.

And they're all coming to the Boston American and they're coming soon. They may get here tomorrow. They may come tonight. No one knows.

The bag makers are working day and night. They're piling up such a supply that it will not be necessary for the Boston American to stop the bag sale again.

So folks, just clip that coupon today. Do it right now. Then get one tomorrow and one the next day and you'll be ready for that announcement.

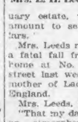

Take a tip from one who knows, the wise folks who get in line early will be in luck for they will get away without getting in the rush that is sure to come when the Boston American resumes its bag sale at the office at No. 80 Summer street.

ASSAULT ON INMATE BRINGS $25 FINE

Lowell, Feb. 22.—T. Robbins, an attendant at the State Infirmary at Tewksbury, used soap and water to wash out the mouth of a patient who had called him a vile name. He was fined $25 by Judge Enright, who said such actions bring discredit to State institutions.

FOUNDLING GIRL MADE HEIRESS TO MILLIONS

New York, Feb. 22.—By the will of Mrs. Louise Hartshorne Leeds, wife of Warner Leeds, and sister-in-law of the late William B. Leeds, the "tin plate king," Joy, her nine-year-old adopted daughter, is left a trust fund of $250,000, outright when she becomes thirty-five. At the death of Mrs. Leeds' husband, Miss Joy receives the residuary estate, which is believed to amount to several millions of dollars.

Mrs. L. H. Leeds.

Mrs. Leeds met her death through a fatal fall from a window of her home at No. 11 East Sixty-fifth street last week. She was a stepmother of Lady Lee, of Fairnham, England.

Mrs. Leeds, in the will, directs:

"That my daughter be educated in an atmosphere of culture and among people of refinement I am especially anxious that her mind be directed toward the conditions and needs of the human family."

Mrs. Leeds, kindhearted society woman, visited the Bellevue Hospital eight years ago. She became attached to a winsome little child and adopted her. So a foundling picked up in an East Side hallway became Joy Louise Leeds, heiress.

MISSING GROCER WRITES TO WIFE

Auburn, Me., Feb. 22.—"I'm going West," wrote Pierre Nadeau, a grocer. The letter told his wife the news that Pierre and their four-year-old daughter, Jeanne, were together. They went last week. She has not decided whether to take steps to recover the child.

NO COMPLAINT AT SPRINGFIELD PROBE

Springfield, Feb. 22.—Not a peep of complaint was ventured at the public hearing of the probe of the recent Springfield Gas Light Company explosion. The board waited for half an hour and adjourned the hearing to a later date in Boston. Gas officials will then be interviewed.

'COUNT' IS HUNTED AS RUM THIEF

Broadway Pal of "Big Ed" Furey Sought in Looting of Wine Cellars

The "Count," a blond giant and a Broadway dandy, pal of "Nicky" Arnstein and "Big Ed" Furey, who sported a badge and played plain clothes officer with Furey is sought by the Massachusetts and Federal authorities in connection with the wholesale robbery of bootleggers and the looting of wine cellars of wealthy New Englanders.

The "Count" is thought to have aided Furey and his band of men and women confederates along the North Shore. Disclosures today showed that $600,000 of the $5,000,000 bonds stolen from Wall Street were brought to Boston and distributed to brokers according to the confession made by Joseph Gluck, an alleged confederate of Furey, Arnstein and the "Count."

H. N. Guterman

STOLEN BONDS SOUGHT.

The authorities have never been able to determine how many of these bonds were hypothecated in this city. Attorney Harry N. Guterman, counsel for New York surety companies, is investigating the careers of Furey and the "Count" and trying to locate stolen bonds disposed of here.

Gluck's confession to the Federal officials in New York discloses the spectacular career of Furey, who, according to Gluck, figured in a jail delivery in Cleveland and the shooting up of a resort in Alaska. Furey, while on bail, walked out of a court room in New York as his trial for extortion was under way and was a fugitive until captured at the gun point in Lynn Sunday night.

EXCHANGE IN BOSTON.

Asked about stolen bonds which he admitted turning over to Nick Cohen, another alleged member of the bond gang, Gluck said that the exchange occurred in Boston at the Hotel Touraine.

Q.—Did you know the week or the months? A.—No, I was stopping at the Touraine Hotel.

Q.—Did they register with you? A.—No. I was the only one registered at the hotel.

Q.—Did Furey ever mention the names of his brothers? A.—Yes.

Q.—Joseph? A.—Harry.

Q.—Did he tell you about Harry? A.—Yes sir.

Q.—Did he tell you what Harry was? A.—Yes, a wire tapper.

Q.—Did he tell you about Joseph, alias George Ferguson, alias George Reynolds? A.—No.

OUT OF PRISON.

Q.—Did he tell you any of the aliases Harry Furey went under? A.—No, sir. He spoke to me in Cleveland about—he spoke to me about Cleveland—how he took a fellow out of prison.

Q.—Well tell us what he said? A.—That is about all I can remember; in 1909 I guess he mentioned.

Q.—Did he tell you how many times he had been in jail? A.—He said he shot up a place. That is all I know. That is what he told me. He told me he was in a shooting affair in Alaska, too.

Q.—Now when did you first get acquainted with Furey? A.—The night before New Year's; December 31.

Q.—Tell us in your own way how you became acquainted with Furey? A.—Adler was in the store at the time—

Q.—(Interrupting.) Who is Adler? A.—Jack Adler.

Q.—Son of Jacob Adler, the actor; is that right? A.—Yes. I have known him some time. I was introduced to him by Chubby.

Q.—Did you know Jack Adler at that time to be a bad boy, a thief? A.—Yes, I understood he was bad.

CAME TO HOME.

Q.—Did you know him to have stolen? A.—No, I never knew that.

Q.—But you knew Chubby had stolen? A.—Oh, yes.

Q.—Now Adler came to your home? A.—Yes.

Q.—In the Bronx, or in Mount Vernon? A.—In Mount Vernon. He stayed there until—

Q.—Adler and Furey together? A.—Oh, no.

Q.—Adler first? A.—Adler was in the store at the time. He came down to see me at my father's store. He asked me for his hat. He was at my sister's wedding and left his derby there. He was leaning against the counter when in comes the Count and Furey. "Hello, Josey, old boy," the Count said. "We have got you right this time."

Miss Elizabeth Drinkwater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Rogers Drinkwater, was married to William Ball Rice of Quincy at All Souls' Church, Braintree. They will be at home at Hingham after a trip to Honolulu and California. The Drinkwaters live on Elm street, Braintree. The bride was a Dana Hall girl, class of 1913 and attended Miss Risser's, Rome, Italy. Mr. Rice is a Harvard 22 graduate.

HUNDREDS LACK COAL IN PAWTUCKET

Pawtucket, R. I., Feb. 22.—Unable to obtain even bag coal hundreds of Pawtucket families are suffering acutely from the intense cold. A thick coating of ice on the Blackstone River has prevented barges from bringing a fuel consignment from Providence and coal dealers and grocers have almost exhausted their supplies. The arrival of a tug from the Charlestown navy yard to break the ice is momentarily expected.

'DEAD' BABE RESTORED TO LIFE

Injection of Adrenalin in Heart Saves Boy Twin at Birth

New York, Feb. 22.—Confirmation of a report of the successful result of one of the most remarkable medical experiments on record, by means of which the life of a prematurely born "dead" boy twin was saved, was obtained from Dr. Philip Mininberg, of the Borough Park Maternity Hospital, Brooklyn.

The boy baby, weighing three pounds, had been born just after a girl twin, who was normal in every way excepting that she weighed only two and one-half pounds.

The twins, children of Mrs. Bertha Isaacson, of No. 6424 Third avenue, Brooklyn, came into the world on the evening of February 12 at the hospital, Dr. Mininberg being the officiating surgeon. In less than a minute after birth, the doctor found the boy baby was "lifeless," there being no movement of either the heart or lungs.

HEART INJECTION.

Dr. Mininberg decided upon heroic measures. Seizing a hypodermic needle, he pierced the chest wall and injected directly into the tiny heart a solution of adrenalin, an essence of a sheep's gland, in an effort to re-establish heart action. Thereupon he proceeded to massage the child's heart, which soon afterward began to respond.

Assisted by two of the hospital nurses, the Misses Jenny Murkin and Dorothy Genser, the surgeon drew half an ounce of blood from the baby's veins to relieve any tax on the pumping functions of the heart.

At the same time, by means of a pulmotor and a tank of oxygen, respiration was achieved. After an hour of tireless work the baby's heart action and respiration were found to be normal.

BABIES GAINING.

Both babies were then placed in an incubator, and for the first three days were fed from a medicine dropper. Thereafter, their feeding was natural but they are now always returned to the incubator after the taking of nourishment. They are to remain in the incubator for one month.

Dr. Mininberg said that the girl baby had gained half a pound in weight and the boy ten ounces.

The physician said this was possibly the first instance on record where adrenalin had been used in a case of child birth, although there had been precedent for the use in the restoration of life.

BISHOP BABCOCK NOW CONVALESCING

Suffragan-Bishop Samuel G. Babcock of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts, who underwent an operation 12 days ago at the Eliot Hospital, Audubon road, is now able to sit up and will see his friends next week. He will not return to his permanent quarters at the Hotel Kenmore until the week after next.

Bishop Babcock

Bishop Babcock is most popular among the clergy of his diocese. His experience as a business man in Rhode Island before entering the ministry has qualified him in many ways for his responsible position of looking after the smaller parishes under his charge.

Diva Urges Study of Piano

SOPHIE BRASLAU.

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 22.—Sophie Braslau, Metropolitan opera star, who is visiting here, said:

"I advocate the compulsory study of the piano in all public schools in order that America might compete with Europe in the development of musical talent and genius. I believe that geometry and kindred subjects should be overlooked and give place to the education of children in music."

DYING VICTIM ASKS FREEDOM FOR ASSAILANT

Dying at the City Hospital after being shot, in a row over a woman, Jacob Dennison, thirty years old, colored, pleads with the police for clemency for his alleged assailant, Joseph Francis, also colored, who was arrested following the affray, charged with assault with a revolver.

The shooting took place at No. 9 Williams Terrace, Roxbury, in the home of Francis. The latter, the police say, returned home to find his wife and Dennison together. When he refused to leave Francis whipped out a revolver and shot him. Francis then summoned the police.

Francis told the police that Dennison is a former sweetheart of his wife and has been annoying her continually of late.

Questioned by the police at the hospital Dennison denied that he had provoked the assault. He declared, however, that he did not wish to prosecute Francis and that he would not appear against him.

Dennison is an employe of the Pullman Company. He is single and lives at No. 36 Sawyer street, Roxbury. He has a sister, Mrs. Lottie Reed, of No. 96 Magazine street, Roxbury.

LAWYER GIVES COAL TO WESTFIELD POOR

Westfield, Feb. 22.—Attorney Fred L. Norton of Boston, who recently informed the local fuel distributor that fifteen tons of coal stored in the cellar of his Broad street residence here could be used among poor people of the city, has notified Mayor Louis L. Keefe that the city will not have to pay for the coal. Mr. Norton desires that it be given to needy families of the city without cost.

MOURNS LOSS OF GIFTS

"Social Standing" in Natick Injured by Act of Former Fiancee

The "social standing" of a handsome chauffeur in Natick was jeopardized by his fiancee's favors to other men.

When he remonstrated with her she jilted him. These features were culled from testimony of James Healey, employed by a wealthy Newton business man, in his suit for $3,000 breach of promise before Judge King in Middlesex County Court.

MOURNS FOR GIFTS.

His former sweetheart, Miss Grace C. Hedge, of Natick, is defendant. She failed to return gifts of jewelry, Healey declared in answering questions about the baser, material side of the romance, but her alleged fickleness affected most damagingly the mental well-being of the plaintiff, he said.

"I couldn't sleep nights. I loved the girl and lost all faith in everything when she broke our engagement. I lost so much sleep at night that I was drowsy in the day and almost lost my job," Healey testified.

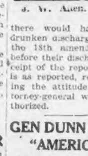

TESTIMONY EXCLUDED.

This testimony was excluded, however, upon objection of counsel. As a lover, Healey, by his own words, was generous and thoughtful. He advanced Miss Hedge $250, he said, so that her father might buy a second-hand automobile. He gave her a hope chest, a valuable watch, two rings, a set of earrings and a bracelet, he declared. Valuation of several hundreds of dollars was placed on these trinkets of regard.

Ofttimes, he stated, he engaged an auto at a cost of $25 a day and acted as host on long drives for Miss Hedge and her parents. Miss Hedge will take the stand tomorrow.

WESTFIELD LEGION ON ALLEN'S TRAIL

Westfield, Feb. 22.—The American Legion post has voted to instruct the adjutant to communicate with Senator Dexter A. Snow and obtain, if possible, a stenographic report of the testimony of Former Attorney General J. Weston Allen before a legislative committee on prohibition laws, in which it is alleged he charged that there would have been 2,000,000 drunken discharged soldiers had not the 18th amendment been passed before their discharge. Upon the receipt of the report, if the statement is as reported, resolutions condemning the attitude of the former attorney-general will probably be authorized.

GEN DUNN TO TALK ON "AMERICANIZATION"

"Americanism" will be discussed by Brigadier-General John H. Dunn, State Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Sunday afternoon, at the bi-monthly "smoker" of St. Alphonsus Association, Roxbury. The meeting will be in the clubrooms of the organization. General Dunn is convinced that many native born need the influence of Americanization as much as aliens.

GOVERNOR CLASPS HANDS WITH THOUSANDS AT RECEPTION

COX AND WIFE RECEIVE BAY STATE CITIZENS

Governor Channing H. Cox today held the annual reception of the Governor to the people of Massachusetts.

Standing on an improvised rostrum in the Hall of Flags at the State House, the Governor clasped hands with thousands of men, women and children, of all stations in life, who came from all corners of the Commonwealth to greet and be greeted by the chief executive.

Channing H. Cox.

This democratic institution was first established by Governor George D. Robinson in 1885. It attained its greatest height of popularity when the genial David I. Walsh, plumed knight of Democracy, within two hours shook hands with more than 8,000 people.

HANDSHAKING TIRING.

Handshaking is the most tiring of indoor sports. Governor Cox wore blisters on his hand for two weeks after the last reception.

Rumor has it that he has acquired the handshaking patent of the late Theodore Roosevelt and Richmond Pearson Hobson. They always got the grip first, an instant before some brawny but thoughtless giant crumpled their hands in his massive clasp.

Not since the days of Robinson did the public reception begin under more auspicious and enthusiastic and impressive circumstances.

First to greet the Governor were the venerable Grand Army veterans, veterans of other wars, and delegations from the regular army and navy, followed by representatives of the new Massachusetts National Guard.

IRISH AND SCOTCH.

The Charitable Irish Society marched in a body. Walter Scott Juvenile Pipe Band played while the Highland Dress Association marched through in kilts and the other plaid adornments.

Boston Lodge of Elks, of which the Governor is a member, sent at least 200 members to the reception. Odd Fellows, Masons, Knights of Pythias, and the other secret fraternities were in the respective groups. Uniformed letter carriers and blue-coated, brass-buttoned policemen, Boy Scouts, and Girl Scouts were conspicuous.

Not neglecting to mention the several thousands of plain men and women, some representative of the aristocratic families, others modest representatives of the "newer races," with babes in arms, who filed through happily to pay and receive homage.

Mrs. Cox received with the Governor. Uniformed members of his military staff were in close attendance. Music was furnished by the 101st Field Artillery Band, stationed in Doric Hall adjoining.

ORDER OF RECEPTION.

This is the order in which the organizations were received by the Governor:

G. A. R. staff, officers and auxiliary; Sons of Veterans, staff and camps; Daughters of Veterans; Massachusetts Society of the Cincinnati; United Spanish War Veterans.

United Spanish War Veterans' Auxiliary, Spanish American War Nurses, American Legion, Sons of American Revolution, Society of Colonial Wars, Daughters of the Revolution, U. S. Army Officers, U. S. Navy Officers, Adjutant General's Department, M. N. G.; Inspector General's Department, Judge Advocate General's Department, Quartermaster's Department, Ordnance Department, Medical Department, 51st Infantry Brigade Staff, 101st Infantry, 104th Infantry, 181st Infantry, 51st Artillery Brigade Staff, 101st Field Artillery, 102nd Field Artillery, 101st Engineers, 102nd Ambulance Company, 26th Division Train, 26th Signal Company, First Coast Defence Company, Anti-Air Craft Battalion, First Aero Unit, 2nd Separate Battalion Infantry, Retired Officers, M. N. G; Retired Officers, M. N. M.; Military Order Loyal Legion, Military Order Foreign Wars in U. S.

BOY SCOUTS ENTER.

Boy Scouts of America, Charitable Irish Society, British Naval and Military Veterans' Association, First Regiment M. V. M. Veterans, Warren Lodge, I. O. O. F., Order of Patriot Dames, U. S. A., Daughters of 1812, Daughters of the American Revolution, Children of the American Revolution, First Regiment Mass. Heavy Artillery, Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, Massachusetts Girl Scouts.

Highland Dress Association, Walter Scott Juvenile Pipe Band, Boston police officers, Boston Police Relief Association, Worcester Garden City, Inc., Lexington Minute Men.

Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, Fusileer Veteran Association, Army and Navy Union and Auxiliary, Ninth Regiment Veteran Corps, M. V. M., Girl Scouts Drum and Bugle Corps, Swampscott.

Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Order of the Eastern Star, Knights of Columbus, Independent Order Odd Fellows, Daughters of Rebekah, Benevolent Protective Order Elks, Knights of Pythias.

Massachusetts Society Mayflower Descendants, Foreign Consuls in Boston, Daughters of Massachusetts, Massachusetts Nautical School Cadets, Intercolonial Club, Aleppo Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Canadian Club of Boston and Auxiliary, Bishop Cheverus Assembly, K. of C., Ronan Sewing Guild.

HAVE YOU BAD SKIN

People Notice It. Clear It Up with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

MURRAY CASE EXHIBITS

The amazing rise of Robert Murray (insert above) from railroad engineer to president of a corporation incorporated at $1,000,000 with ambitions, as outlined in its prospectus to investors to organize a drug store chain, has reached the point where "blue sky" officials are investigating its application for permission to sell stock. Above is shown Murray's application for registration as a stock salesman. Below an extract from his prospectus. The fact now develops that Murray confessed to polygamy and served a year of his jail term. The application above contains a sworn statement the signer has never been convicted of a felony.

EX-CONVICT HEADS BIG STOCK SALE PROJECT

Murray was arrested on the charge of non-support and polygamy.

Mrs. Murray told the Somerville police that her husband had married another woman, named Emma Chase, and had a home in Medford. Mrs. Murray even went to the home of the Chase woman and confronted her with the story of her husband's double life.

With the investigation by the police of her story came to light a little girl from Franklin, N. H. This girl, Marie Chabotte, declared that Murray had married her. She told how she had waved at him day by day as he passed in the cab of his engine. How he had dropped a note for her and of the engagement and marriage which followed.

FIND FOURTH WOMAN.

Then a fourth woman came to light. Her name was never revealed. But according to the police Murray claimed that Mrs. Rachel Rosanna Murray was his second wife.

Murray pleaded not guilty to the polygamy charge when he was arraigned after indictment in 1916. But he later pleaded guilty to the charge of polygamy and on January 8, 1917, in the Middlesex County Court was convicted of polygamy and sentenced to the Middlesex County House of Correction for two years.

Murray served a year. He failed in health, was transferred to the prison camp at Rutland and was finally paroled.

Murray's wife, Rachel Rosanna, obtained a divorce in 1916, and was awarded $12.50 a week for the support of her three children.

BACK TO RAILROAD.

After leaving prison Murray went to work for the New Haven road as a shop worker.

Last July he walked out with the other striking shop men.

He obtained a position with the M. V. All-Weather Train Controller Company at No. 153 Summer street. On July 28, 1922, he applied for registration with the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities as a stock salesman in Massachusetts. He was registered.

This concern was later told, according to officials of the Public Utilities Department, that an investigation would follow if they did not close up. They closed. Murray was out of a job.

GERM OF GREAT IDEA.

Then came the germ of a great idea.

On December 12, 1922, the Inter-State Drug Company, Inc., was incorporated at the State House. At the head of this organization was Robert Roscoe Jefferson Murray. He had dropped the Roscoe part of his name.

According to its circular the purpose is to acquire "the entire assets of an old and strongly established New England Wholesale Drug house, which has a most enviable business record of over sixty years standing," and to establish a chain of retail drug stores which will be supplied by the wholesale organization.

There will be nothing but profits rolling in for investors, according to the prospectus.

A "Druggist Club" is among the plans outlined in the circular. To belong the druggists must each pay $100. A thousand members is the aim.

ELABORATE OFFICE.

The company has an elaborate suite of offices at No. 185 Devonshire street. Everything in the office is mahogany. An air of wealth pervades. When you walk in you seem to think in terms of gold dollars.

There are several private offices and a large number of mahogany desks in the large outer office. There is a big cashier's cage which was unoccupied when the writer called. The office is set for a big business when it breaks.

The officers as announced in the circular issued are: R. J. Murray, president; W. C. Cawley, treasurer; G. L. Edwards, secretary. The directors are: R. J. Murray, G. L. Edwards, W. C. Cawley, A. J. Evers and A. H. Nichols.

The treasurer proves to be Miss Winifred C. Cawley of No. 429 Massachusetts avenue, Boston.

Miss Cawley is apparently somewhere in her twenties. She is above average height and of queenly appearance. The police of Somerville say that she was formerly a trained nurse. The man listed as secretary has since died.

AS TO OFFICERS.

This is how the circular issued by the corporation speaks of the officers:

"The men directing the policy of the company combine wide experiences in the drug, tobacco and general business, with ambition and determination to dominate this line on sheer merit of product and soundness of business policy.

"Each department is headed by the one man best fitted by personality, education and training to conduct his particular department in a way that will render both harmony and efficiency.

"R. J. Murray, president, has had wide experience in the tobacco business, and is highly fitted for the many ramifications of this department.

"W. C. Cawley, treasurer, formerly with C. L. Richardson & Co. of Boston, is well known in the drug trade and enjoys a reputation as a real business manager. C. L. Edwards, secretary, has been chosen on account of his business acumen as a retail store manager."

Through a Boston brokerage house the corporation has applied to the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities for permission to sell 2,000 shares of preferred stock at $100 a share. The company also desires to dispose of 1,000 shares of common stock at no par value. The preferred stock is supposed to pay 8 per cent. dividends annually.

QUESTIONS ASKED.

When the application reached the "Blue Sky" law officials at the State House a questionnaire was sent Murray. According to officials of the department, no answer has been received as yet. As a result the broker who planned to sell the stock has not been able to offer a single share.

When the application to sell the stock came to the Department of Public Utilities the officials there started to look up Murray. He had been registered as a stock salesman twice.

According to law the salesmen applying for registration as stock salesmen in Massachusetts must declare over their signature that they have never been convicted of a felony. Murray, according to his signed application at the State House, did just this, although he had pleaded guilty to polygamy and had served a jail sentence.

The "Blue Sky" law officials have started an investigation and will turn the evidence over to the district attorney of Suffolk County if Murray is found guilty of declaring falsely that he has not committed a felony.

Murray, when a reporter from the Boston American entered his offices, refused to say a word about himself or his business and referred the reporter to District Attorney O'Brien of Suffolk County for all information. Miss Cawley, treasurer of the organization, also declined to talk.

District Attorney O'Brien, it turned out, only knew Murray from the fact that he was Penal Commissioner when Murray was paroled.

FORM FOR COIL ON SPIDER WEB EASILY MADE

A self-mounting and rigid and easily made form for winding spider-web inductances is described by Victor S. J. Whitcomb of Mapleton street, Brighton, in the free tube contest.

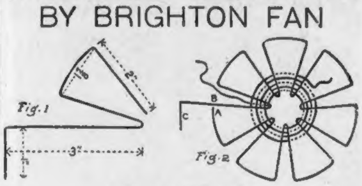

Several coils of different values may be wound on forms, and then substituted for one another depending on the wave length it is desired to receive, in much the same way as honeycomb coils may be used.

"Articles needed," Mr. Whitcomb says, "are thirty-two inches of wire (bus wire will do), a ruler and a pair of pliers. Iron or steel wire will not do. The size of the form is not arbitrary, though I have found it most satisfactory.

"The winding is started by twisting a few turns around any wire near the centre and finished by twisting around the wire where the last turn ends. My coils are wound single, over and under, and have given better results than I obtained with the regular winding.

"The tiny eyelets screwed into the panel receive the mounting arm, thus allowing instant interchange of coils of different values."

WRINKLE SENT IN BY BRIGHTON FAN

FOR SPIDER WEB

A handy form for winding spider-web inductances. A wire 32 inches long (bus wire will do) is bent as shown in Figure 1. The 2-inch by 1⅝ inch "spoke" is repeated six times, until a finished form is made like Figure 2. C inserts in two tiny eyelets screwed in panel. Join A to B with a drop of solder, thus completing the seventh spoke.

64 JAILED IN BOGUS MONEY RAIDS

New York, Feb. 22.—Secret service men, acting simultaneously on word flashed from Washington, swooped down upon the agents of an alleged international counterfeiting band throughout the United States and by arresting 64 men and women dammed the flow of a stream of spurious money, estimated at more than $1,000,000, which had its fountain head in the basement of a house in Greenwich Village.

The headquarters of the gang in Manhattan's Bohemia yielded twenty-eight men and one woman, and nearly every big city in the United States saw an arrest in this consummation of eight months of search from coast to coast. Joseph Palma, secret service agent in charge of the clean-up, said he believed that the coordinated arrests has broken up the ring completely and has ended one of the most successful and far-reaching counterfeiting plots in the history of the country.

BIG DOG SHOW DRAWS CROWD OF 5,000

More than 5,000 persons attended the eleventh annual dog show of the Eastern Dog Club in Mechanics Hall, which will continue through today and tomorrow.

The exhibition is one of the best Boston has seen in years, 1,237 aristocrats of the dog family being among the entries. Animals are there from California, Texas, Florida and Canada and other points throughout the United States, while there is a heavy representation from Greater Boston and New England kennels.

The largest showing is made by Boston terriers, which led the interest of the spectators, with fox terriers and shepherds a close second.

In the shepherd class Giralda's Schatz V. Hohentann completed his championship by taking first as winner's dog. He is owned by Giralda Farms Kennels. The blue ribbon in winners' bitches of the same breed went to Freia V. Humboldtpark, owned by Joselle Kennels, who completed her championship this week at the show in Worcester. She is the half-sister of Hamilton Anni V. Humboldtpark, owned by the Hamilton Kennels, German grand champion in 1919 and 1920, Holland champion in 1921 and American champion in 1922. This bitch is also at the show competing for special prizes.

DOG FOUND GUILTY; OWNER PAYS $850

Portland, Me., Feb. 22.—"Buddy," a dog, was found guilty of vicious assault by a Superior Court jury here and the owner must pay Frank K. Norton, a Falmouth milkman, $850 damages. The defence admitted the attack, but denied that the dog's teeth accomplished more than a mouthful of trousers and underclothing.

FORBES AWAITED IN VETERANS' BUREAU SCANDAL EXPOSE

CLEAN BILL FOR EX-HEAD LIKELY, SAY SENATORS

By JOHN A. KENNEDY.
Copyright, 1923, by Universal Service and the Washington Herald.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—The arrival of Colonel Charles R. Forbes, resigned director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, who is expected to reach New York from Paris Friday, is all that is delaying the special Senate committee which is investigating charges of waste, mismanagement and irregularities in the administration of the bureau.

Evidence which will point to a verification of the epitomized estimate made by a high American Legion official, who characterized the bureau as "the great American pork barrel," has already been placed before the committee, it was learned here.

Summed up, the officials and ex-service leaders quizzed charge:

Existence of an organized conspiracy to defraud the government in the sale of surplus army supplies allocated to the bureau, which may bring indictment of several former officers of the veterans' bureau.

Payment of excessive rentals for schools and hospitals and offices used by the bureau in carrying out its work.

"Grabs" by construction and material firms in connection with the building of hospitals.

Favoritism shown certain real estate owners in the amounts paid for building sites.

MORALE DESTROYED.

General destruction of the personnel morale of the bureau following the expose of the above situations during the past month.

Based on the evidence submitted and other material investigated by the Department of Justice, the Veterans' Bureau has now taken the lead as the haven for "friends" of deserving political henchmen as well as a favorite pie counter for those who contribute to campaign expenses.

The Veterans' Bureau was organized twenty-two months ago to serve disabled and maimed veterans of the World War. It has been liberally provided with funds by Congress, that body having recently appropriated approximately one-half billion dollars for its maintenance for the next fiscal year.

EXPENSES WASTED.

Twenty cents out of very dollar paid in taxes by American citizens is paying for the carrying out of the Bureau's needs—but investigators, members of Congress and various ex-service representatives charge that nearly one-fourth of this amount has been either wasted or misappropriated.

The hospitals, schools and offices involved in the scandal are located in all sections of the country, from Northampton, Mass., to Stockton, Cal., from Camp Lewis, Wash., to sections of Georgia. Ramifications of the surplus supplies sales are concentrated in the East, as further sale was stopped by executive order.

Senators on the investigating committee, as well as those close to President Harding, are firm in their belief that Colonel Forbes will be in no way involved when the expose of the scandal is made. They contend that the director was ill-advised by his subordinates and tricked into moves by those who were to benefit from contracts made.

BUREAU WELL MANAGED.

But miraculous as it may seem, the bureau has been fairly well managed in spite of the political pie-cutting. Beneficiaries of the soldier-relief organization seemed better satisfied than at any other time in its twenty-two months' history—or rather have been until revelations of irregularities in the bureau management were made public.

PACIFISTS ATTACK TRAINING CAMPS

The pacifists of this city, led by Mrs. Lucia Amy Mead and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, daughter of the former President Wilson, are attacking the Citizens' Military Training Camp to be held at Camp Devens this Summer. Meetings held at No. 3 Joy street have deplored the policy of the War Department as imbuing the minds of the youth with military stunt. Letters to this effect have reached the headquarters of the First Corps Area. There it was stated no answer would be made.

WEDDED BLISS HAS ITS OWN BAD MOMENTS

SCENE FROM "ELSIE"

John Arthur and Ada Meade in spirited argument over their own affairs in "Elsie" at the Shubert.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

A MUSICAL comedy with a plot, a sustained story that has a well defined beginning and a logical solution, may be set down as considerably more than an innovation in the theatre. It is unbelievable.

And then along came "Elsie," not entirely unannounced, mind you, but lacking the benefit of a long Broadway engagement, and right away your idling hours were brightened by the most bristling fun and infectious melody that has been exposed to the glaring view of playgoers since—well, time doesn't matter.

WORTH WHILE SHOW.

The "Elsie" that raised your spirits at the Shubert last night was just plain, unvarnished entertainment, admirably done by players who didn't have to worry along with inadequate material. In the book, as well as the score, John Scholl's actors had something upon which they could lay their hands and apply their talents with a clear conscience, and without the deadening fear that an audience might be wondering what it was all about.

All anyone could do in the face of so much worth while entertainment was to yield to the fun and lend a willing ear to the melody. The author of the book, Charles W. Bell, has almost written a great farce in "Elsie," and you have only to recall that the principal composers of the piece are Sissle and Blake, who did so well for "Shuffle Along," one of the pleasant memories of last Summer's enlivening tilt with hot weather drama.

MISS GEAR SCORES.

Interpreting the long list of characters were faces that were new to the local stage—and several that were familiar to seasoned followers of lighter amusement. A high spot in the performance was reached by Luella Gear, whose gifts were slowly developed as "Elsie," rolled from one starting number to another, but which engaged your riveted attention when she finally got away to a clear field. To the casual observer Miss Gear fairly sparkled as a comedienne, but under closer inspection she revealed not merely a fine sense of comedy but a rare understanding of the art of the stage.

Sharing her honors with Irma Marwick, who made a charmingly blonde Elsie, Miss Gear's individual contribution to the evening was sufficient to satisfy any set of nervous authors and composers.

RIOTOUS FUN.

While Miss Gear and Miss Marwick toiled industriously and sang in marvelously good tune, Ada Meade, John Arthur, Stanley Gear, Charles Abbe and Maude Turner Gordon called constant attention to the fact that intelligent acting does not hurt a musical comedy but, on the whole, breeds unexpected delights. No musical comedy of recent vintage, that we can recall, has been so richly endowed with acting talent.

"Elsie" should thrive and prosper. Before the week is ended you'll be whistling its tunes and, anyway, it is too riotously funny to escape attention.

DOWNEY CASE GOES TO JURY TOMORROW

By HARRY A. BENWELL.

After a day devoted to conferences in the lobby of Judge Bishop in the Superior Court, the Downey case, on trial before a jury, was put over until tomorrow at 9:30.

At that time it is expected that arguments will be made by Assistant District Attorney Maurice Caro, John F. McDonald and John P. Feeney, after which the case will go to the jury.

John P. Feeney

Feeney, who entered the case Tuesday, will argue for Robert L. Finn, and McDonald for Humphrey Lane, co-defendants with Paul Downey on charges arising from the larceny of $127,800 from the Federal Trust Company.

The conferences in the judge's lobby followed the filing of a motion by Attorney Feeney at the opening of the court, and gave rise to much gossip and excitement in the courtroom. Counsel would only say that points of law were discussed and the situation clarified so that certain things might be eliminated when Judge Bishop charges the jury. For instance, it was contended by the defence that Finn and Lane, who were indicted for larceny and receiving stolen property, could not be guilty of both offences.

Relieved of Catarrh Due to La Grippe

Thanks To PE-RU-NA

Mrs. Laura Berberick, over 70 years of age, 1205 Willow Ave., Hoboken, N. J., writes: "A severe attack of La Grippe left me with a hoarseness and slime in the head and throat. I had chronic catarrh. It grew worse. I could not lie down or sleep at night. I was always bothered by the slime, pain in the back and a terrible headache every morning.

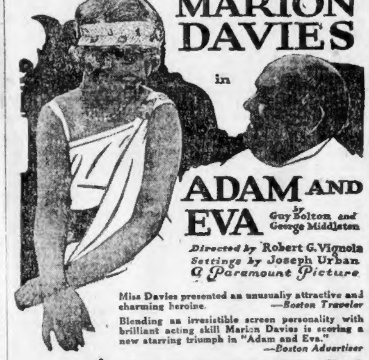

Finally I bought a bottle of Pe-ru-na which was of great benefit. It gave me blood and strength. I have no pains in head or back, nor noises in the head. The slime has gone and I can sleep. My weight has increased. I am cheerful and happy, thanks to Pe-ru-na, which I shall always keep in the house and recommend to my friends."

For every form of catarrh Pe-ru-na meets the need. Coughs, Colds, Nasal Catarrh, Indigestion, Bowel disorders are all forms of catarrh.

Buy it any where in tablet or liquid form.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

CORNELL TEAM COMES WITH NINE ALMOST CERTAIN SCORERS

HAS GOOD CHANCE TO WIN IN TRIANGULAR

They're making Jack Moakley's Cornell team the under dog in Saturday's big triangular meet at Mechanics Building, yet it would not be a surprise should Cornell nose its way into the championship.

With Lovejoy in the sprint; Righter and Crosier in the middle distances; Kirby in the one mile; Bonsal in the two mile; Treman and Watt in the hurdles; Nichols in the high jump, and Guinlock in the pole vault, as probable scorers, and a dozen other possible scorers in those or other events, the Ithacans loom formidably.

Each of those mentioned is an athlete of proved worth. Neither Harvard nor Dartmouth shows that number of athletes whose quality in the events on Saturday's program is established.

The Crimson can claim only Burke, in the mile; Jenkins in the broad jump; Davis in the pole vault, and Eastman in the shotput, as men of recognized class in their events, while Dartmouth's most counted upon performers are Brown in the high jump; Libbey and Skiles in the pole vault; Young in the two mile; Sibley in the hurdles, and Lee in the weight events.

Both the New England institutions boast men of possibilities, it is true, but possibilities may, or may not, materialize in Saturday's stiff competition. Consequently the occasion for granting Cornell but an outside chance of capturing the meet seems a bit far-fetched.

Meet Will Be Held On Saturday Afternoon

The triangular meet, which is to be run in conjunction with the annual New England indoor championships, will get underway Saturday afternoon, when three of the triangular field events and one of the New England weight numbers will be contested at the Harvard baseball cage.

Incidentally one of the baseball cage numbers—the pole vault—is certain to develop some of the best battling of the entire meet. Entered in this are Libbey and Skiles of Dartmouth; Davis of Harvard and Guinlock of Cornell. Three of this quartet — Libby, Davis and Guinlock, were scorers last year, and the work of Skiles in the recent B. A. A. games, when with a small handicap, he won the vault, has stamped him as a pole jumper of rare parts. All four have done better than 12 feet in indoor competition, and it is possible a new indoor record in the event may result from their Saturday meeting. Dartmouth is expected to capture two places in this number, with Harvard and Cornell sharing third, or dividing second and third place points with one of the Hanoverians.

Broad Jump and Weight Also Held in Cage

The other college events to be conducted in the Harvard baseball cage are the broad jump, in which Percy Jenkins of Harvard is the favorite, and the 35-pound weight throw, in which Red Lee of Dartmouth has been picked to win. The New England 35-pound weight throw also will be held there during the afternoon.

STAR ATHLETES IN TRIANGULAR MEET

A. G. WATT, A. B. FREEMAN AND H. N. STONE, THREE CORNELL HURDLERS
K. P. SIBLEY AND J. H. LEE, DARTMOUTH ENTRANTS

STAR ATHLETES COMPETE FOR LEGION

With the Gaston 600-yards run, the City of Boston one-mile run, and the special invitation three-mile run, as the feature attractions of a long and thrill-pomising program, the annual American Legion games get under way at the East Armory, East Newton street, this afternoon.

As Walter Koppish of Columbia, recent conqueror of Jake Driscoll of the B. A. A., and Allen Helfrich of Penn State are starters in the 600, and Joie Ray of Chicago, holder of many world's and national distance records, will perform in the mile, new records in those events are well within the range of possibility.

In All There Are 19 Events on Card

In all there are nineteen events on the program. In addition to the three special numbers there are the 50-yards open handicap dash, one-mile open handicap, 880-yards open handicap; 50-yards schoolboys' dash, 440-yards schoolboy run, 1,000-yards schoolboy run, and ten relay races, seven of which involve high or prep school teams, two of which involve service or Legion teams, and one of which is a college event.

Without exception the fields entered in the events are large and of high quality, and an afternoon of delight is assured local track followers who journey to the East Armory this afternoon.

Order of All the Events Is as Follows

50 Yard Dash—Schoolboy; trials and semi-finals.

50-Yard Dash—Open handicap; trials and semi-finals.

1 Mile Open—Handicap.

TECH BOXERS HAVE TWO TOURNAMENTS

The M. I. T. boxing team battles the University of Virginia boxers today and Navy Saturday. This is the first meet that the Engineers have had with Virginia. A series of hot bouts is expected.

In the Navy team the Cambridge battlers will run up against a squad of champions.

Lew Phillips, in the 135-pound class, is the flashiest boxer at the institute and has not lost a bout this season, while Captain Eddie Moll, who will box in the 145-pound bout, was undefeated up to last Saturday when he took on two bouts in the Yale meet.

Tech will be seriously handicapped in the 115 pounders by the absence of Al Lindsay, who had not lost a bout up to last Saturday. He will be replaced by Woodward, who showed some style on the freshman team last year. The Engineers have a good man in Norwood, who is also a wrestler, in the 125-pound class.

EXETER WILL SEND TEAM HERE MARCH 3

Exeter, N. H., Feb. 22. — Exeter will send a team to the New England Preparatory School meet March 3 to compete on class A against Andover, Worcester Academy, Huntington School, Hebron Academy and Moses Brown School of Providence.

The Exeter entries will be: J. A. Brandenburg, R. McCreary and H. W. Burns for the 60-yard dash; R. H. O'Connell, J. R. Prendergast and H. K. Weir for the 300 yards; T. O. MacMakin and C. A. R. Kellar for the 600; A. H. O'Neil and W. H. Norton for the 1,000 yards; R. H. O'Connell, G. W. McDaniel and F. Hollis for the running high jump; J. R. Prendergast and R. W. Healey for the shot put and the relay team will be selected from Brandenburg, McCreary, Burns, O'Connell, Prendergast, Weir, McMakin, Kellar and O'Neil.

STASIAK GRAPPLES WITH CALZA TONIGHT

Stanley Stasiak or George Calza?

That is the question discussed in sporting circles and will be decided up at the Grand Opera House tonight.

The Polish settlements are backing Stasiak, the Polish Hercules, to win, while the Italians are backing Calza, the Italian champion, to win. Other wrestling fans are divided as to the result.

Stasiak finished his training at the Union Gymnasium and pronounces himself fit and ready for the battle of his life.

Calza also says he is fit.

Stasiak Declares He Expects to Win

In a statement to the press Stasiak declared that he expected to win before an hour. "I realize," said the Polish mat star, "that Calza is a tough man to beat, but he has never had any one his own size that could take him the pace, as well as give him some rough stuff.

"His toes are his weak spot and when time is called I will be on my way at top speed and you will see the Italian champion start for the ropes."

On the other hand, Calza says he realizes the Pole is a tough customer or Lewis or Zbyszko wouldn't dodge a meeting with him, but he is confident of his own ability to beat any living man. He declares he won't be content to merely stick the time limit, but plans to carry the match right to his rival and expects to secure a fall.

Sam Smith Will Be Third Man in Ring

After discussing Bill Brown of New York, George Bothner and several other noted referees it was decided to have Sam Smith as the third man in the ring.

George Kotsonaros, the Greek champion, is all ready for his finish match with Peter Goulette, the French light heavyweight champion. This match should be a hummer.

Perelli, the Italian middleweight champion, will have a tough one to ... Eddie Boylen, the Swedish ...ght.

THIS is a holiday, dedicated to the Father of His Country, being unique that way, inasmuch as it is the only real break we can discover handed to father anywhere along the scroll of history. G. Washington was unique, anyhow. We find him first in childhood, admitting that he manicured his dad's favorite cherry tree. Little Georgie probably had the only axe in the province, so he couldn't alibi his way out, but that doesn't interfere with the glory and moral effect of that pretty boyhood tale.

If Georgie had lived in these hectic days, he would have lost out on the woodman stunt, as the old man would have been forced to lay low the famous tree to combat the coal famine. He could have used one of the bridges to cross the Delaware, too. And when he got over, he would have discovered that the prohibition agents had raided that Hessian orgy, and there was no action there. The movie directors would have seen to it that things were fairly comfortable for the army at Valley

Forge. George, in these times, would probably celebrate his birthday by being a big league holdout. He had a great arm. He threw a sovereign across the Hunson River, a king across the ocean, and an army across New York State. The scouts in those far-off days said he was a great fighter, but had it been the present, they would have put him down as a second Christy Mathewson. George was the father of his country, all right, and he has a swell bunch of wayward children left kicking around, take it from the reformers.

FROM what we see in the papers, Serge would make very good material for Isadora's divorce suit.

Were the burning words of Klaxon.

"No Pyrene can quench the fire

Oh, my Presto-lite desire,
Let us marry, Timken Djer-kiss."

TECH GYMNASTS IN MEET WITH TIGERS

With a victory to its credit over Harvard and Penn in the opening meet of the season, the Technology gym team takes on Princeton Friday night and the Navy on Saturday.

The strength of the Orange and Black aggregation is not known, but the victory over Harvard and Penn makes the Cardinal and Gray squad confident of holding its own.

TECH SWIMMERS TO RACE AGAINST ELIS

The Yale swimming team will receive a visit Saturday from the Technology natators, who will try to drown the Blue swimmers in the same manner that the Eli tankmen swamped the Engineers last year.

Despite the fact that the Cardinal and Gray met with little success against Amherst and the Navy, two strong teams, the Tech watermen have been practicing hard, and in an endeavor to be in top form will hold practice today.

Techs hopes rest in Aze Ames, who with his team mate, Bill Rowe, will swim the backstroke, and Captain Bill Stewart and Jerry Nauman in the 100-yard breaststroke.

The Tech team at New Haven will be as follows:

Fifty-yard swim, Marsh and Palmer; dives, Carver and Holm; backstroke, Ames and Rowe; 100-yard, Dunn and Marsh; plunge, Williams and Perlman; 100-yard breaststroke, Stewart and Nauman; and relay race, Dunn, Taylor, Marsh and Palmer.

WARD DECLARES SHADE CAN'T BEAT HIM

Dave Shade and Georgie Ward, the welterweights, may just as well ... up their minds now to put a check on their publicity experts and hie their way to Boston town as soon as they can to enter the ring at Mechanics Building, Tuesday, have it out with the gloves and let the fans see who is entitled to entertain the populace with a lot of empty chatter. They are booked for the Arena Club show.

Some fighters cannot be convinced that another has a little something on him when they get together with the padded mitts. "So-and-so can beat him nine out of ten times," he'll admit; "but that guy Whoisthis—never, not him, he can't beat me in a thousand years," he'll say.

That seems to be the trouble with Ward. George will admit, probably, that there is some battler that has an edge on him, but he cannot be told by anyone that Dave Shade is a better fighter than he.

They've met once and honors were even.

That is why Ward has been so heated up over the almost conceitedness of Shade in the latter's willingness to talk on Johnny Wilson.

That Ward isn't taking himself too seriously will be admitted by all those who saw him in his two Boston fights. He was beaten to a decision here by Eddie Shevlin, but it will be remembered that his match with Shevlin was postponed from Monday until Thursday because of rain and he was stale and over-anxious when ring time came.

Shevlin might have suffered the same as a result of the postponement of the match, but, as Ward puts it, it was in Eddie's home district and made considerable difference.

If Ward can defeat Shade, he'll show it.

TECH'S BASKETEERS WIN AGAINST MAINE

Excitement ran high at the Technology gym when the Engineer basketball five nosed out the University of Maine team for a 21 to 20 victory. Miller of the Cardinal and Gray team was the star and was responsible for 11 points of the Tech total. Berg played one of the fastest games seen in a long time on the Tech floor. His dribbling was a feature of the meet and he caged ten goals from free tries.

The first half ended with the Cambridge students five points in the lead. Immediately after the opening of the second period the lads from the Pine Tree State narrowed the lead down to one point, and after that the two teams ran up the score neck to neck. With only a few minutes to play the Maine five scored a lead of one point when Storb, replacing Davidson of the Engineers, shot the winning goal on a long heave from the floor.

DARTMOUTH DEFEATS HARVARD IN "SUDDEN DEATH" PERIOD

THEIR HOCKEY BATTLE FULL OF THRILLS

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

It wasn't Harvard red, either. It was a couple of Dartmouth reds—Red Hall and Red Learned—centre and goal, respectively, on the Hanover hockey team. Their red thatches, sticking out above their green jerseys, were very much the centres of attraction when Dartmouth vanquished Harvard at hockey, 1 to 0.

And such a game—the most thrilling and sensational staged this season—a game that went three full sessions without a score; then two extra five-minute sessions without a marker; finally to be decided after two minutes and fifteen seconds of a "sudden death" period, when "Red" Hall trooped up the ice, made one shot that was turned aside by Bigelow, the Harvard goalie, and then whipped the rebound into the Crimson cage for the victory.

The jammed Arena gathering was on its feet almost throughout the entire 57¼ minutes of play, for sensation followed sensation, with first Beal, and later Owen and Crosby scintillating for Harvard, and Hall, Foster, Perry and Learned performing likewise for the Green.

"Ted 'Red' Learned saved the game for Dartmouth, and Bob 'Red' Hall, won it for the Green," was the way a fan summarized the contest.

The former, who was junior golf champion in 1921, and who weighs scarcely more than 100 pounds, delivered an exhibition of goal guarding such as never has been surpassed in college hockey. Skates, boots, shinguards, chest protector, stick and hands seem to behave equally well for the Hanoverian goalie, and he seemed to know which one of the collection to use for each of the many shots that were directed at him, for invariably they came to him and stopped, stopped abruptly and were daintily moved away from the danger zone.

But Hall Deserved an Equal Share of Glory

But Hall deserved an equal share of the glory, and got it from the thousands who followed the bristling contest.

Hall seemed to delight in pestering George Owen, the Crimson captain. "Red" did his pestering in a nice way—that is to say, he would allow George to get the puck, and then proceed to take it away from him. He did this to the delight of the many Dartmouth rooters throughout the bulk of the regular playing session, but in the extra periods, prior to the "sudden death," George seemed to be getting back at him, for George was the boy who kept the Dartmouth goalie so busy in those extra periods.

Red Dribbled George Clear Off Balance

George had every intention of continuing that stunt when the "sudden death" session came, but after two minutes of play, "Red" Hall, carrying the puck, dribbled George clear off his balance, and then "Red" proceeded right through the Crimson outer defence and whipped his preliminary shot, and when that was checked, caught the rebounding puck with the toe of his stick and shoved it home for one of the sweetest victories a Dartmouth athletic team ever scored against Harvard.

Remarkable defensive play, in which Owen, Crosby and Bigelow featured for Harvard, and Foster, Perry and Learned for the Green, abounded throughout the play, and it was their work that forced both teams to resort to long shots except on rare occasions throughout the battle.

Credit Due Every Man Who Was in Contest

Credit, however, is due every man who took part in the contest for the game found each figuring in plays which checked their opponents at critical times.

In well-directed shots Harvard had the edge, as it evidenced in the fact "Red" Learned was called upon to make thirty-two stops to the twenty stops made by Bigelow. However, Dartmouth assaulted the Crimson cage fully as often and missed at least one and possibly other sure points because of lack of direction in their shots.

The game was remarkably cleanly played, only one penalty, that which sent Walker of Harvard from the ice for illegal checking—being inflicted.

The summary and lineup:

HARVARD		DARTMOUTH
Walker, Guild, l.w.		r.w., Osborn, Lyon
Beals, LaRocque, Crosby, c.		c., Hall
LaRocque, Hill, Guild, r.w.		l.w., Sheehy, Lyon, Calder
Crosby, Hammond, l.d.		r.d., Foster
Owen, r.d.		l.d., Perry
Bigelow, g.		g., Learned

Score—Dartmouth 1, Harvard 0. Goal—Hall. Referees—Don Sands and William Stewart. Time—Three 15-minute periods, two extra 5-minute periods and a "sudden death."

Here's an Exhumed King Who Actually Comes to Life---By McGurk

STUFFY McINNIS MAY BE FIRST NEW BRAVE

Stuffy McInnis may play the initial sack for the Braves. The former Rockport boy has been unconditionally released by the Cleveland club. But the Boston National club refused to waive when the Indians tried to shunt Stuffy to the minors and asked for waivers on the first sacker.

So by baseball law he will automatically become the property of the Boston club unless he decides to stand on his own prerogative and demand his unconditional release. Baseball law is that after a player has served ten years in the majors he need not accept release to a minor league, but demand unconditional release.

Christy Mathewson

Stuffy has been tendered a contract by the Braves, who want a first baseman to take the place of Holke, who went to the Phillies.

From New York comes word that the money represented by James MacDonough of the Columbia Bank paid a half million for the Braves. This is somewhat at variance with the rumor that the price was $350,000, and another report that the price involved was a third of a million.

MacDonough is vice president of the Columbia Bank and holds a half interest in the Braves, and he and Judge Fuchs will serve as trustees. He wants Boston men to control the directorate and to that end some of the stock will be open for purchase by men of this city.

Says That the Giants Are Not Interested

MacDonough denied that officials of the Giants, or any other baseball club, are interested in the deal. He declared that he and his associates would do everything to make the Braves a formidable club of the senior major circuit.. MacDonough has been an ardent baseball fan for many years.

He and Fuchs will back President Mathewson to the limit. Matty is in control of the executive end of the club for he is also treasurer of the organization.

Names of Boston men for the directorate will be announced in a few days.

Will Not Have Any Thing to Say Now

"I do not care to say anything at this time, but may have quite a lot to say about it later. I will wait a while and see how things turn out."

That was the reply McInnis made when he learned that he had been released by Cleveland and is expected to sign up with the Braves.

Manager Fred Mitchell appeared to be somewhat surprised. He said the statement that McInnis is going to play with the Boston club is premature.

Conway Thawed Out; Picks Winners in Big Mat Bouts

Jack Conway, who is vacationing at North Conway, N. H., has dug his way out of the deep snow and comes to bat with the following wireless on tonight's wrestling matches at the Grand Opera House:

My selections for the bouts are Calza, Kotsonaros and Perelli.

I look for the main event to be a wonderful struggle. If the match was to a positive finish, I might change my ticket, as in that case I figure Stasiak would have an excellent chance to win out. Calza will be able to stand him off for 75 minutes.

SCHOOLBOYS BUSY WITH TRACK AND HOCKEY

By FRED C. LANE.

The busy Winter campaign of the schoolboys continues on its merry flight with a long list of activities for the youngsters. Today hockey games are slated for the Arena, and there are several track events for schoolboys at the American Legion meet.

Boston College High and English open the day's program with a hockey game at the St. Botolph street rink at noon. This will be followed with contests between Somerville and Newton and Cambridge Latin and Arlington.

Much depends on the noon-day contest. Both teams are tied for second place in the City League and appear as formidable foes to Dorchester, which clings to the top rung of this league by a slender margin.

Has All the Ear Marks of Hot Contest

It has all the ear marks of a red hot contest. The B. C. H. team has a fast forward line while English is strong on the defence.

Though the Greater Boston hockey league championship is safely wrapped up in Melrose, there is interest in the games to be played.

Somerville and Newton have been the big works in this league and played hockey that is commendable. This meeting brings together two "sixes" of equal strength that are fighting demons from the first to the last whistle.

Arlington Will Play Against Cambridge Latin

Arlington High, runner-up in the out of town league to Melrose, meets Cambridge Latin. The Cantabs have been an in-and-out organization this Winter and most anything can be expected of the boys from across the Charles.

They gave battle to Exeter's fast hockey team after three consecutive defeats, and left the Exonians bewildered by their dazzling play. They will prove worthy opponents for Arlington in today's game if they display only a part of that speed.

Schoolboy Events Will Be Interesting

The card of schoolboy events at the American Legion games includes a 50-yard dash, and a 1000-yard run, and a large number of relays.

The 50-yard dash is well sprinkled with fast flyers. Harrington Moore of Medford is favored to win his second gold medal of the week at these games.

Boston track followers will have their first chance of the season to witness Bill McKillop, the English High captain, who sprang into prominence over night with his sensational work in the triangular meet with Harvard Freshman and Latin School.

McKillop Is the Foremost Boston Athlete

McKillop is the foremost Boston school athlete. The 1,000 is his favorite distance though he does well in the 600. The field against the English High flyer is fast and experienced.

It's a grand chance for the addition of more laurels to his long list of achievements.

The Lynn English-Lynn Classical relay race carries more than the usual amount of rivalry. When the teams met at the Y. M. C. A. recently, English was the winner by a narrow margin.

During the race the fastest man on the Classical squad, John Clarkin, fell, and he charges that Saul Harris of the opponents pushed him. Harris denied such charges and when the boys meet today the fans should see a real torrid affair.

PRINCETON PLAYS MONTREAL TO A TIE

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 22.—Montreal and Princeton fought to a 4 to 4 hockey tie before a large crowd. The contest was hard fought and clean throughout, and no penalties were chalked up against either side.

At the end of the second period the score stood 4 to 2 in favor of the Canadians. But a desperate and spirited rally, in which some of the finest and cleanest hockey of the season was exhibited, overcame this lead, and the Tigers tied the count.

Montreal then asked leave to withdraw in order to catch a train. The Orange and Black puck chasers have yet to be defeated in the new Hobey Baker Memorial Rink.

FOOD QUERY DEPARTMENT
YOUR FOOD PURCHASING DIFFICULTIES SOLVED

— A THURSDAY FEATURE —

Are you at a loss as to where you can secure some particular brand or kind of foodstuffs? If so, write the Boston American Food Query Editor. We will answer your inquiry in these columns as quickly as possible.

FOOD QUERY EDITOR.
Having recently moved to this city and not being entirely satisfied with the prices charged for quality goods by the markets and grocery stores in this vicinity, would like you to please refer me to a good reliable market, handling a full line of good quality meats, groceries and baked goods at prices that would fit a workingman's pocketbook. Thanking you in advance, I am
MRS. FLORENCE O'ROURKE.
143 Leydan St., East Boston, Mass.

Try the Monican Stores. They carry a full line of meats, fish and baked goods at attractive prices.

FOOD QUERY EDITOR.
Would you kindly tell me where I can obtain fresh killed duckling, and also where are they raised? Thanking you for whatever information I may receive. I am, yours truly,
MARGARET BARR.
89 Moreland St., Somerville, Mass.

You cannot secure fresh killed duckling in the market at present time. The Fall of the year is the proper season. (b) There are some very large duck farms at Sharon, Mass.

FOOD QUERY EDITOR.
Could you inform me where I can procure in Boston Penley's Blue Tag Brand Bacon and Sausage? Very truly yours,
W. S. JENNESS.
35 Cambridge Road, Woburn, Mass.

You can procure Penley's Bacon and Sausage at Dole & Bailey, 19 New Faneuil Hall Market, Boston.

FOOD QUERY EDITOR.
A short time ago I was at a friend's house and they had some delicious bacon. The name is "Easter Brand." I am not able to find any in the markets here. Could you tell me where to find some. Thanking you very kindly. Respectfully,
F. E. CHASE.
1335 Centre St., Newton Centre, Mass.

You can secure "Easter Brand" bacon in Faneuil Hall Market at L. M. Dyer & Co., J. P. Squire Co., Weston-Thurston, Alfred Sears.

FOOD QUERY EDITOR.
Where can I buy some real imported Scotch Oat Meal in cans? Yours very truly,
J. D. CLANCY.
24 Newburn St., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

You can secure Grant's Imported Scotch Oat Meal in two and five-pound tins at Sharp's Market, 177 Federal street.

FOOD QUERY EDITOR.
Can you tell me where I can purchase Libby's jams. I seem to strike many stores who handle their canned fruit and vegetables, but cannot find one that sells the jam. I would also like to know where Swansdown Cake Flour can be bought. Yours very truly.
ELEANOR CALLAHAN.
Revere, Mass.

You can get Swansdown Cake Flour at S. S. Pierce Co. Libby's jam can be purchased at Price Bros., 141 Mass. Ave., Boston, or Manhattan Market, Cambridge.

BEILIS LAUGHS AS 'RABBI' IS UNFROCKED

New York, Feb. 22. — Mendel Beilis laughed today.

There is an incident worthy its own paragraph. For Mendel Beilis' lips have been graven in downward curves for years. It wasn't a pleasant laugh. A note of revenge renders a laugh a grating tone. Yet one felt he was justified in tinging with rancor the first laugh he has permitted himself since July 22, 1911, when he was accused in Kiev, Russia, of slaying a Christian lad to use his blood in a Jewish ritual.

Mendel Beilis

For Beilis had read of the spectacular unfrocking of the pseudo rabbi Yudel Elfenbein, whose testimony had much to do with Beilis' trouble in Kiev.

Elfenbein was dismissed from a Bronx synagogue Monday night after the Society of Rabbis had received evidence that he had been converted to Christianity almost two decades ago in Galicia and for a number of years thereafter had written numerous articles denouncing Judaism.

Beilis said today:

"I was arrested July 22, 1911, when I was a factory foreman on the charge of murdering Andre Uchinsky, thirteen years old. The boy had been found with 103 stab wounds.

"Eventually his murderers, three members of a bandit gang, confessed.

"I was arrested as the murderer. Of course I was acquitted. But I spent two and one-half years in jail awaiting trial. The prosecution got hold of the documents written by Yudel Elfenbein. He had been a Jew who turned Christian and took to denouncing Jews.

"The documents written by him were used as accusations at the trial. They charge that Jews require the blood of a Christian in making matzoths.

WASHINGTON PROVED GOOD PROVIDER

Albany, Feb. 22.—George Washington was a good provider.

A slip of paper upon which he penned his household expenses between May 24 and August 24, 1789, when the seat of government was in New York City, proves this. Extracted from a collection of the first President's original papers, which repose in a vault of the State Education Building, the tabulation shows:

Beer, $170; claret, $105; porter, $45; cordials, $125; vegetables, $290; milk and cream, $145; lobsters, $45; cake (which the family evidently did not like), $4.25; coal, $30; candles, $85; wood, $145; meats, $660.

Based on these expenses the three years' outlay at 4,925 pounds and 7 shillings, was about $25,000. When Washington became President he was unwilling to receive any money from the public treasury beyond his actual expenses. At the time his household included a secretary, an assistant secretary, three aides and eighteen servants, while a livery of sixteen horses also figured into the yearly cost.

SOUTH END BOY REPORTED MISSING

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lentini, of No. 23 Kirkland street, South End, have appealed to the police to find their twelve-year-old son, Guy, who has been missing from home since Monday morning. The boy is about four and one-half feet in height and has a dark complexion, brown hair and grey eyes. He wore a dark grey coat, brown sweater and a blue cap.

Vincent Club Show Author Joins Colony at Palm Beach, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

"ALL bound round with a woolen string" was Mrs. Charles Howard's pet canine when I saw him out walking with his mistress the other day. He's one of those little brown "dachshunds" and he was wearing one of the smartest woolen sweaters known to dogdom.

Mrs. Charles Howard, previous to her marriage last September, was Miss Alice Bremer, daughter of the Theodore G. Bremers of Brookline. Mrs. Francis Parkman (Eleanor Bremer) attended her sister as matron of honor at the ceremonial, which was solemnized in the First Parish Church of Brookline.

The former Alice Bremer, one of the most popular girls of her year, served during the war as a Red Cross ambulance driver. At present she and Mr. Howard are making their home here in town, at No. 3 Champney place.

"PEPPY" Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman (Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor) of Beacon street has joined the "gang" at Palm Beach, where she is the guest of Mrs. John Magee of New York at the Everglades Club.

Mrs. Whitman, who's noted for the smartness of her gowns, will return to Boston in a fortnight. Which, of course, brings to mind that her operetta, selected by the Vincent Club for their presentation this year, remains as yet unnamed. Last year society folk presented a highly entertaining musical comedy written by Mrs. Whitman in aid of the Infants' Hospital. And now all her friends expect that the clever society-writer will cover herself with as much, if not more, glory by this coming Vincent presentation.

Mrs. Whitman's hosts, the John Magees, were, I note, among the dinner-dance guests whom Wadsworth Lewis entertained at the Everglades Club the other evening. Also in the company was Charles Minot Amory of Boston, the Amorys generally making an extensive season of it at the Florida resort.

MISS MARGARET WOOD, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Spencer S. Wood, of Washington, was among the passengers sailing the other day for Europe on the board the Berengaria.

During the war Admiral Wood was stationed in Boston, and it was then that Miss Wood became acquainted with the younger coterie here. She was, I believe, elected to membership in the Sewing Circle.

MR. AND MRS. PHILIP STOCKTON (Margaret Head) have recently arrived at Aiken, S. C., where the Boston colony bids fair to become quite large before the season closes. The Stocktons have taken the house at No. 280 Beacon street for the Winter.

ON Monday afternoon, at three o'clock, Monsieur Guy Envin, the blind French poet, will give his lecture, "My Adventures in America," at the home of Moorfield Storey, No. 24 The Fenway. He will speak in English.

A number of society folk are interesting themselves in the lecture, which is being given under the auspices of the Girls' Friendly Society, which is co-operating with the American Committee for Devastated France. On the same occasion, Miss Suzanne Dabney, member of the Vincent Club, will sing a group of French songs.

Tickets may be had from Mrs. Adams Crocker of Cambridge, Mrs. William Jason Mixter of Beacon street, or at Herrick's.

MR. AND MRS. HARCOURT AMORY and Mr. and Mrs. F. Murray Forbes of Boston have been spending a few days in New York at the Ritz-Carlton.

RABBI TO ADDRESS CONGREGATIONALISTS

Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel will describe Jerusalem under modern eyes before the Congregational ministers in Pilgrim Hall, Monday morning.

Rabbi Levi is trying to get Christian and Jewish worshippers closer together and believes in sidetracking some of the old traditions of the Jews and place a modern view upon Judaism.

UNABLE TO GET DRUGS WOMAN KILLS SELF

Fitchburg, Feb. 22.—Miss Caroline Millett, forty-six years of age, living with her sister, Mrs. Napoleon Lefault of No. 18 First street, Leominster, committed suicide by hanging to a door in her bedroom, after placing her bathrobe cord around her neck. Despondency due to inability to get drugs to relieve pain caused by a spinal trouble with which she has been afflicted for several years led to the suicide. Miss Millett complained of great pains and tried to obtain morphine. She was unable to get it. Dr. D. S. Woodworth, medical examiner, pronounced the death a suicide.

WIFE FINDS 'HUSBAND' IS WOMAN

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 22.—Charging her "husband" is a woman and as such could not contract a legal marriage with her, Miss Blanche Hughes of East Orange, N. J., has instituted suit in Chancery Court here for an annulment of her marriage.

She alleges she was married in 1920 to a person known to her as William J. Houston by a priest in St. Theresa's Church, Brooklyn.

In December, 1920, while living in Detroit, Houston was employed as an automobile mechanic, and requested her to leave him and return to her parents, which she did. She states she has not seen "him" since.

She describes Houston as weighing about 100 pounds, with chestnut hair, gray eyes and a light complexion.

MAYOR TO PRESIDE AT CLUB'S DINNER

William F. Williams, State Commissioner of Public Works, will be the guest of the Mayors' Club at their first dinner of this year which will be held Saturday afternoon. Mayor Curley will preside, having been recently elected as the club's president.

CURLEY APPOINTS 28 WAR VETERANS

Mayor Curley has appointed twenty-eight war veterans to permanent positions as teamsters' helpers in the sanitary and street cleaning divisions of the public works department. They will receive $4 a day.

STATE TO TRAIN PUBLIC SPEAKERS

Professor Albert H. Gilmer, of Tufts College, will be the instructor of the university extension course in public speaking which will open at the Normal Art School, corner of Exeter and Newbury streets, on Friday evening. The course is designed to train men and women to speak confidently and effectively before others.

Plan Reunion

The third annual dinner and reunion of the Story Club of Boston will be held Saturday evening, February 24, at Hotel Lenox.

LYNN ORGY DENIED BY MAYOR

MacPhetres Says Story He Was in Wild Party Is "Political Poison"

Mayor Harland P. McPhetres of Lynn denounced rumors that he had participated in a four-day drunken orgy recently in a home in the fashionable section of the city as the "spawn of poison politics."

The Mayor's bitter resentment of the rumors was expressed at the annual banquet of the Prospect Club in its Central Square rooms. More than 200 members heard him ask "of what nth power of depravity can these minds be composed whose animus against me classifies them with the lowest type of scandal-mongers?"

OFFERS $500 REWARD.

"I will give $500 to anybody who can prove that I attended or was even invited to any such orgy," he offered.

The rumor had it that the Mayor's car was parked outside the residence on Grosvenor road, and that a prominent city official present announced when the "party" was at its height.

"The sky's the limit, folks. The cops are in the bag!" About that feature of the maze of rumors circulated since the "party" became Lynn history, the Mayor had this to say:

"If anybody in Lynn produces evidence which I can accept as conclusive that any policeman refrained from stopping this so-called orgy after complaints of neighbors, I, as boss of the police department, will discharge that officer without a hearing."

13 GIRLS AT ORGY.

At times, McPhetres' voice cracked when excitement pitched it high.

"I was not invited and was not present at this so-called drunken orgy," he declared.

The "orgy" referred to was said to have been held in the home of the young scion of one of Lynn's wealthiest and oldest families. Present were said to have been a millionaire hay and grain dealer, a shoe manufacturer, the son of one of Boston's most famous lawyers, a Lynn physician and thirteen chorus girls. The "party" lasted four days and four nights, the rumors had it.

Coal for Lawrence Seized by People of Sydney, N. Y.

Binghamton, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Sixty families of Sydney, near here, were found to be possessed of less than a day's supply of coal. So residents seized a carload consigned to Lawrence, Mass. And what did the railroad do, do you think? It diverted two additional carloads, one consigned to Albany, the other to Bloomingdale, and dispatched them to Sydney. Moral: When statistically hot and physically cold—but it's evident.

GIRL ACCUSING PASTOR CALLED 'VAMPIRE'

Salem, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Miss Iva MacMillan, titian haired high school teacher of Salem, is a "Main street vampire." So charge friends of the Rev. E. L. Jones as they rally today to the support of the Methodist Episcopal clergyman here, named as the father of the girl's dead baby.

Mr. Jones and his attorneys have affidavits, according to the clergyman's friends, in which the character of the teacher is attacked.

This evidence was gathered by Mr. Jones, it is claimed, in an effort to clear his name of the charge of being the parent of the girl baby born to Miss MacMillan, January 3. The baby died six hours after birth.

Mr. Jones refused to talk about the girl today. He admitted he had been doing some investigating, but said:

"I do not want to say anything for publication derogatory to the girl."

Mr. Jones admits his association with the girl, but denies that he was ever alone with her.

Through his attorneys he has started an action to change the public record of death and burial, in which he is named as the father of the love child. The case will be argued in April term of Supreme Court at Hudson Falls.

BEECKMAN LORILLARD OF NEWPORT DEAD

Newport, R. I., Feb. 22.—Beeckman Lorillard, son of Katherine Beeckman Lorillard and the late Louis L. Lorillard, died at Phoenix, Arizona, on February 8, according to news that has just been received here. Mr. Lorillard, who was a nephew of former Governor R. Livingston Beeckman, had been making his home in Arizona for several years on account of his health. He was thirty-eight years of age. Besides his mother he is survived by two brothers, George L. Lorillard, who lives in Paris, and Louis L. Lorillard, who now resides at Pomfret, Ct.

PAWTUCKET ICE SUPPLY AMPLE

Pawtucket, R. I., Feb. 22.—Pawtucket is assured of adequate ice supplies for the Summer, according to Henry L. Russell, president of the Pawtucket Ice Company, who asserts that not a cake of ice will be sold outside the city and that no increase in price need be feared. Over 30,000 tons of ice have been harvested during the past month.

"DOT" CLARK DROPS $200,000 SUIT

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 22.—The $200,000 damage suit of Dorothy Clark against Herbert Rawlinson, film actor, which was scheduled to be resumed in court was dismissed on a petition filed by Miss Clark's attorney, Lorrin Andrews. It was stated the matter had been settled out of court.

Dorothy Clark.

Miss Clark alleged that several years ago in a New York apartment the film actor attacked her. Counsel for Rawlinson informed the jury, when the trial opened, that they intended to prove that Rawlinson was the victim of a blackmail scheme.

HOSPITAL DOCTORS STRIKE

21 Quit in Quincy in Protest at Management; Volunteers Fill Places

Sixty patients in the Quincy City Hospital are not to suffer by the "strike" of 21 physicians of the hospital staff, whose resignations, effective February 28 at midnight, have been accepted.

Closely following news of the doctors' "walkout," the report is made that twenty-seven physicians of Quincy have volunteered to fill places on the staff.

RESIGN IN PROTEST.

As a protest against the "board of managers and the management of the hospital" which they deemed "detrimental to the best interests of the hospital," twenty-one members of the present staff of twenty-four physicians, tendered their resignations to Mayor Bates.

This action was the climax of a situation which has been the chief topic of local discussion since the mayor's inauguration. The hospital board has been a stormy petrel for months.

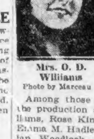

MAYOR BATES' IDEA.

Mayor Bates declared that he was going to try out an idea of his, arrived at after months of study, he said. The idea was appointment of a physician as superintendent of the hospital.

The old hospital board resigned in a body and when two of the mayor's appointees failed to agree with his policies, he discharged them. To fill these vacancies he appointed his son, Russell T. Bates, and Fred F. Green, who was elected chairman. The Quincy Hospital has eighty-five beds. A staff of twenty students and six graduate nurses is in attendance. An interne doctor is in constant attendance.

CLUBWOMEN TO GIVE THEIR ANNUAL SHOW

A crowded house is expected tonight in Jordan Hall at the annual show of the Professional Women's Club of Boston, entitled "A Honeymoon in 2000." The score was written by Mrs. Grace Warner Gulesian and the book by Mrs. Henrietta M. Wyeth, both members. The dances were arranged by Lucille Perry Hall. May Fiske Hoffman was coach.

Among those who will appear in the production are Mrs. O. D. Williams, Rose Kingsley, Nettie Baker, Emma M. Hadley, Nan Gurney, Vivian Woodlock, Helen M. Whitten, Mabel Barstow, Maud Lyons, Maud MacIntosh, Evelyn Kinsman and Mabel R. Mah.

ANNUITY REFUSED WIDOW STIRS BISHOP

A Boston industrial concern which refused to award an annuity to the widow and family of a man killed in the concern's employ was flayed by Bishop Charles L. Slattery in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Bishop Slattery.

"The value of human life and human soul is worth more than all the property in the world, but the board of directors did not seem to recognize this," the bishop declared.

KIDDIES TO FIND WELCOME

Warm Back Bay Apartment at Disposal of Sufferers During Day

"American people with children, or old and sick people suffering from the shortage of fuel, can find temporary shelter in my large and heated apartment."

(Signed)

DR. PETER TSCHITSCHKAN,
No. 362 Commonwealth Ave

This is the simple announcement sent out to the fuelless people of Boston.

Behind it is the inspiring story of the young Russian doctor, who, because of his unselfishness, wants to be an Aladdin for poor families who are suffering from cold. The handsome young Russian had a Tolstoian vision that made him establish a relief centre in the very heart of Boston's exclusive Back Bay.

CAN STAY ALL DAY.

The freedom of a big seven-room apartment, heated with giant steam radiators to a more than comfortable temperature, will be turned over to the kiddies and their mothers and fathers who have been huddling wretchedly in chilly homes. They may come as early as they please in the morning, arriving at 6 o'clock if they want to, and stay until bedtime. If need be, the benevolent doctor says, ararngements may even be made to have them spend the night.

Mis Marian Kenedy, the doctor's secretary, will assist in making the guests comfortable and happy. Dr. Tschitschkan is a bachelor who leased the large apartment for the sole purpose of doing his part in relieving the sufferings of the coalless of Boston.

WANTS KIDDIES.

"I want to see my lonely bachelor quarters overrun with little children. I want them to be playing all about, enjoying this abundant heat. I have read in the Boston American of their sufferings and my heart would not be human if I did nothing to help," the young Russian said.

"I walked down Commonwealth avenue the other day just at dusk as the lights in the great houses were being lighted. Cheery, beautiful rooms shone through the windows, all empty. The contrast between these homes and the cold stricken homes of some other people is hard to understand.

"Sometimes, when people are suffering, this contrast makes them feel that there is great injustice in our society. It is to offset this injustice in a tiny degree and make these sufferers know that they have one friend, at least, that I am making my offer," he explained earnestly.

There is but one stipulation made. That is that the people must be American. Dr. Tschitschkan, although born in Russia, is an ardent American and a great booster of American ideals.

HOPES OTHERS WILL AID.

Dr. Tschitschkan is a graduate of the Imperial Charcoff University of Russia, and a graduate of Harvard besides receiving various degrees from other European universities.

During the war he served in the Russian army and was wounded. Later he returned to America and served in the Medical Division of the U. S. army.

"As long as this emergency lasts there is no excuse for many beautiful mansions along Commonwealth avenue and Beacon street not being opened to needy people. I hope many will follow my example

45 PATROLMEN TRANSFERRED IN SHAKEUP

A general order by Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson transferred forty-five patrolmen.

Patrolman Robert Caverly of the drug squad was promoted to sergeant for excellence of work in the past two years. Patrolman Michael J. Conway of the Joy street station was found not guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer, it was also announced.

The transferal of the large number of officers is one of the biggest shakeups in years. Men who have been on duty in certain posts for a long time have been changed to other districts.

Two reasons are given for the shakeup. One was the readjustment of unit strength in several divisions and the other was "accession to requests worthy of attention."

TWO JAILED AS GAS METER THIEVES

The police of City Point station believe they have broken up a notorious gang of gas meter thieves who have been responsible for a series of over twenty breaks.

Charles Sullivan, eighteen years old, of No. 47 Gates street, South Boston, and Albert Kelley, seventeen years old, of No 234 Bowen street, South Boston, were arrested after a chase on I street by Patrolmen McGinnis and Lanigan. In South Boston court the two were sentenced to two months each, after being identified by Mrs. Theresa Cavanaugh as the two who attempted to break into her home at No. 616 East Third street.

The members of the gang, the police say, are all equipped with gas meter keys and have been operating in South Boston for over a year.

LATE TRAINS HAMPER MAIL SERVICE

The delayed arrival of mail trains, consistently, and the severe weather which has laid up as many as 60 per cent. of Boston's letter carriers at one time, were conditions under which the postal service has labored so far this Winter, according to Postmaster Roland M. Baker.

"During recent weeks, at times, 60 per cent. of the general postoffice employes in this city have been absent from duty through sickness, with no experienced substitutes."

Postmaster Baker advances interesting information about local railroad service in informing the public of conditions in the service. His statement was made in answer to complaints which have been received of late.

"One of the greatest difficulties has been the delayed arrival of mail trains. Trains with which this local service is most vitally involved have averaged to be late possibly in excess of 75 per cent. of the time," he says.

ITALIANS INSIST ON "MICHELANGELO"

"Ridiculous and cheap" was the characterization P. A. Santosuosso, editor of the Italian News, placed on opposition to the order to change the name of Michael Angelo square to Michelangelo square. The project involved expenditure of only $250 while Italian residents of the North End resent the alleged misspelling of the great sculptor's name.

DRY RAIDERS INVADE CONSTABLE'S HOME

Providence, Feb. 22. — Federal agents raided the home of Antonio Capuano, No. 988 Charles street, and seized "doctored" liquor and fake revenue stamps. Capuano is a constable in North Providence.

WOMAN FIGHTS POLICEMAN AND DOCTOR

In a battle with police in the South End, a woman was subdued by a terrific punch in the jaw which knocked her out.

The patrolman who struck her fought in self defence.

She is at the City Hospital listed as Mrs. Mary Reardon of No. 57 Concord street. She is thirty-five years old.

According to witnesses, Mrs. Reardon created a disturbance in a South End drug store. An officer arrested her and was attacked by her while awaiting the patrol. Fellow officers came to his aid and the woman was subdued.

At the hospital her jaw was found to be badly hurt. An attempt was made to treat her injuries, but she sprang in attack of the physician and fought several who came to his aid.

The officer who delivered her at the hospital neglected to give his name or station.

Two other women and three men are suffering from alcoholism in the hospital. They are registered as:

Mrs. Margaret Kane, seventy-four years old, of No. 47 Rice street, North Cambridge; an unidentified white woman, picked up in Roxbury; Robert Boudreau, twenty-four years old, of No. 1696 Washington street, South End; John O'Shea, thirty-six years old, address unlearned; John P. French, thirty years old, of the U. S. S. Florida.

HOLIDAY PROGRAM AT CAMBRIDGE JAIL

Special arrangements were made by Sheriff John Fairbairn of the East Cambridge jail for the observance of Washington's Birthday today.

John Fairbairn

A special dinner at noon, followed by entertainment by the Instrumental Musical Club of Technology was arranged. A radio concert on the new $300 radio outfit constructed by the inmates in the electrical department of the jail, and one of the best around Boston, was anxiously awaited by the men.

SALESMAN SUICIDE IN BOSTON OFFICE

Ill health is declared the reason for the suicide of George E. Brigham, fifty-five, married, of Wollaston. He was city salesman for John P. Squire Company of No. 5 South Market street. His body was found in his office, a revolver at his feet.

13 FAMILIES FACE EVICTION IN DORCHESTER

Thirteen families face eviction from their homes in Dorchester as a result of a change of ownership.

An appeal made by them to the City Housing Committee has caused an investigation of the case.

A notice from a legal representative of Daniel Riley, said to be the owner of eight houses on Newell street, occupied at present by the tenants, worries them.

"That the premises be vacated immediately because a "thorough renovation" is planned was an edict in this notice, the tenants say. Because of the existent housing situation, the tenants told the committee that they could not secure new quarters for at least thirty days and requested action.

WOONSOCKET LOSES EX-MAYOR BY DEATH

Woonsocket, Feb. 22.—The funeral of City Solicitor Adelard Archambault, found dead in his home, was held today. He was Mayor for four terms and former Representative and Lieutenant-Governor.

GOODWIN FLAYS COURT LAXITY IN AUTO CASES

Courts and officials of the State were taken to task for failure to prosecute drunken auto drivers in a speech before the committee on legal affairs by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin.

He spoke on a bill which would make operation of a car while under the influence of liquor punishable by a jail sentence.

"What's the use of making new laws," he asked, "when your courts do not enforce existing laws?

"Last year there were 100 second convictions for operating while under the influence of liquor. The law expressly provides a jail sentence in such cases. There is no alternative, yet only nineteen of these 100 men went to jail.

"The courts are to blame and when I say that, I want to particularly include the district attorneys. There was a case in Hingham in which a driver of an automobile was sentenced to six months in jail when on a joyride his car killed two girls. He is as free as the air today. I can supply other cases from the record."

They say most men owe all to their wives. Yes, all their woes.

When two deaf and dumb women start panning their husbands there's no use in talking.

Every time a girl rejects a man's proposal she gives him a new lease of life.

When a girl's mother prepares a dainty meal for a couple and then leaves them to enjoy it by themselves it's a sure sign the man's been elected by the family council as eligible to join their ranks.

As fortune tellers women are born palmists. All women seem to have the happy faculty of knowing when they can get their husbands to come across.

In most instances the peace at any price man is married.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

PROMINENT physicians say that it's bad for working people to eat too much in the middle of the day. The employers are co-operating with us by chopping our salaries and cutting down our lunch time.

DIETING will take the wrinkles out of your face, but it will put them somewhere else.

VERY few stenographers eat anything at the lunch hour, judging from their appetites when we take them out to dinner at six.

THEY go hungry whil they're by themselves, but they break their fast as soon as they meet us.

ONE guy took a dame who wasn't hungry out to dinner, but she brought along a girl friend who was.

WHAT one dame couldn't eat, the other one took home.

SHE couldn't eat any dessert, but she told the waiter to wrap it up.

A LOT of clerks take their lunches to work with them, but by the time the stenographers each get through borrowing a sandwich and a piece of cake the clerk has to go out anyway.

ONE typist got real sore at a bookkeeper because he brought chocolate cake in his lunch box and she liked mocha.

MOST stenographers never know what they're going to eat for lunch until the men employes start opening their dinner pails.

IF they don't like what you've got, they go over to some other desk and eat.

AN appetite is no respecter of lunch boxes.

ONE dame stole a piece of pie out of the cashier's basket and then expected him to pay the doctor's bill when she got ptomaine poisoning.

NO wonder so many clerks suffer from indigestion. They've got to eat quickly while the guy who owns the lunch isn't looking.

EATING your luncheon out is more expensive than bringing it from home. It's much cheaper to take it, especially for the fellow who knows where you keep it.

THE fellow who carries his lunch to work with him could save a lot of money if he'd put a burglar alarm on his dinner pail.

THIS is better than having a detective to discover which stenographer's finger prints are on your pie.

THE physicians are right, eating at lunch time is liable to prove very unhealthy, especially if you happen to get caught by the person whose lunch you are eating.

GERTIE'S GUARDIANS

Story of an Eccentric's Will and How the Interested Executors All Made a Play for the Heart of the Lovely Heiress

By Bertha R. McDonald

WHEN it developed Stephen Loebell's will provided for the appointment of three of Gertie's admirers as her guardians, the circle in which they all moved was plunged into chaotic excitement.

Stephen Loebell had been widely known as an eccentric but this last act of his life was by far the queerest thing he ever had done and no one seemed able to see any particular reason for it. Three guardians for one little girl!

They were an oddly assorted trio. Jerry Leeds, with his six feet of splendid, broad shouldered manhood towered over the other two, and gave the appearance of being a thorough man of the world.

Under-Sized Fellow

Bob Neville was one of those under sized fellows who seem to feel it necessary constantly to remind the world of his existence, since his stature failed in that respect, yet Bob was a good sort.

Jimmie Montgomery was just between the two—well built, of medium height, with the kindliest blue eyes one ever looked into. They always seemed tender and smiling, for Jimmie was brimming over with sentiment.

To Jerry this affair of the guardianship appeared in the light of an adventure; to Bob, it brought a sense of his own importance; but to Jimmie it was a sacred trust, left him by a dear old friend of his beloved father's.

When the subject of the joint guardianship came up for discussion with Gertie, their ward refused to see it in any other light than a huge joke.

But the three guardians finally persuaded Gertrude Loebell heiress, that they were serious—that they had no desire to clutter up her life in any way, but that she could count on them always, at any time, for anything. "All right," she returned merrily "but you'd better watch my step, for I'm liable to lead the fellow that exhibits a check rein a right merry chase!"

Admiring Slaves

It was Jimmie who first discovered Gertie's interest in art and immediately thereafter, he who never has sensed any difference between acquamarine and chrome yellow, began to exhibit an unusual interest in lavender twilights, golden sunsets and [illegible]te dawns.

Moreover, Bob Neville and Jerry Leeds promptly fell into line, and finally they all went so far as to purchase paintings, the brain children of one Arnold Burrows, a modern artist, who just then was creating a furore among the studio hounds.

In spite of their spoken determination to stick together on the task in hand, the three young men fell to watching one another so closely that finally everything else was forced decidedly in o the background, and by the time Summer arrived, relations had become so strained, it was clear to Jimmie, the sentimentalist, at least that something must be done. So he called a meeting of the three guardians at his club and appointed himself master of ceremonies.

He told them of his discovery that Gertie expected to spend the next three months in three different places and suggested each of them visit her at one of the stops unhampered by the presence of the others, in order to find out just how they stood.

The first stop, Pine Lake, fell to the lot of Bob Neville, and when he journeyed hither in June Gertie's delight at his coming was so evident his pride was immediately salved into forgetting he had considered his colleagues as rivals.

In July Jerry Leeds found his way to Shoreline an ocean resort, where he found his interesting ward exclaiming daily over the wonderful ocean views, and if he grew a bit fed up on talking continually in terms of art as the days sped by, his errand bade him not betray his boredom by word or deed.

Jimmie Comes Last

It was August when Jimmie Montgomery, having drawn the longest cut, sought the majesty of the mountains—and Gertie—at Manitou, and September 1 when he appeared at the meeting place, where Bob and Jerry were waiting for him, the expression on his face was apropos of absolutely nothing.

"Come on, Jimmie—out with it!" demanded Neville. "Leeds and I know you must be the lucky one."

"Lucky?" repeated Jimmie, a smile crooking one corner of his sensitive mouth. "Perhaps, but that remains to be seen. I—"

"Suppose there's nothing left for Bob and me but congratulations to the prospective bridegroom," interrupted Leeds, with an attempt at indifference, as he extended his hand.

"Then don't pick on me!" protested Jimmie a bit hotly, with a brushing movement toward Leeds' hand. "I—I was the best man Gertie was married to that blithering idiot, Arnold Burrows, the day I struck Manitou. Yes—Arnold Burrows—that pretense of an artist who poor-fished us into passing up good shekels for his daubs last Spring! She's been engaged to him for months, it seems, but we, fools that we were! were so blamed busy watching each other we lost the real point."

"She might have said something, any way," grumbled Bob industriously kicking the leg of a chair. "We had a right to know."

"Oh, well," sighed Jerry, ostensibly stifling a yawn, "there are still a few glittering gold fish left in the aquarium, but let me tell you something—this is my valedictory as a guardian. Here's to our honorable exit!"

If It Were Leap Year

DRAWN BY POPINI

Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WHEN hearts are warm with eager love and eyes abrim with hopes untold—what wouldn't one give if 'twere possible all things to tell? In Leap Year, so she thinks, it would be possible to give her love its voice. Beneath the banner of old custom she'd fling her arms around the man she loves, and—whispering in his ear—would pour forth her proposal.

But it isn't Leap Year—the calendar upon the wall discloses February's last day as 28, and mentally she hangs a sorrowing crepe upon that final, disappointing date. For one she doesn't love loves her, and—while Cupid breaks his useless arrow on his bended head "that man!" begs her to be his wife. And she must listen just to be polite.

"Oh, if it only were Leap Year!" she sadly sighs.—Popini

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Anne Decided From What Rosa Said That Jim's Letter Was Tampered With in His Own Office Building, Where It Was Mailed

By Ann Lisle

"BRAVO!" chuckled Rosa. "That makes it worth while. I shall come here to find you after you go away so nobody [illegible] and do not let me know."

"How did you find out?" I coaxed.

"I tell you," replied Rosa, ingenuously. "I think my Manuelo he likes you, maybe Or it might be that he does not like you, and so does not trust you. Whichever it is, he has begun now to watch you a little. And so when people thinks it is funny that I do not see more of you, at least I can smile and say how it is I am busy and that you were so and so last night. Then they shall think, maybe, it is how you wish me to be also there, and it is so I could not come."

Spanish Blood

"I see," I said quietly. "Rosa, if I have not seemed as cordial as your Spanish blood would require, won't you allow for the fact that I have no real home of my own and that from the very beginning you seemed headed for hospitality other than my own?"

"You think to make up now in case Jaime comes soon?" sneered Rosa cuttingly. "You think, maybe, if I do not make a good report of you he is angry. So you wish to make it all nice and sweet with me, eh?"

"It isn't that," I persisted. "Don't you see what has touched me and made it possible for me to speak out like this is the knowledge that you might have wanted to be with me more? I didn't know there was anything for you to be sensitive about. I thought you chose to be with Virginia and that, in any case, you deliberately avoided me."

"How is it that you get such an impression?" demanded Rosa.

"Why, didn't you bring her a letter from Jim and deliberately hold mine back from the mail for twenty-four hours?" I demanded.

"I know not what you mean" cried Rosa furiously. "Like Jaime tells me I mail you the letter at once when I am here right away so soon I can to his office And when you meet me you treat me as stranger. Never is it explained to me why you shall pretend you do not get my letter. I mail it special delivery like I am told, and I know how fast it is those letters go."

"Did you mail it as soon as you landed?" I asked boldly.

"No; I mail him when I get to the office building of Jaime. There I buy the special delivery stamp at the cigarro stand and off she go."

"Someone tampered with that letter," I said quietly, expressing the theory, Ralph Lacy had evolved some time ago.

"For why? There is nothing in it." Rosa shrugged the matter away.

But I felt that I had a new piece of evidence to add to those Mr. Lacy was collecting. For there had been no special delivery stamp on the letter when it came to me.

Since Rosa Cordova says that she mailed Jim's letter special delivery from his building, I have no doubt that she did just this. However little I like Rosa, I know she is truthful in all matters pertaining to our business relation. The fact she has given me only clinches Mr. Lacy's theory that the letter was tampered with. But it seems also to indicate that something happened to it right in the building where Jim's office is located.

Determining to get this information to Ralph Lacy as quickly as possible, I turned back to Rosa eager to find a way of making our relationship a little more cordial.

"Don't you see that not getting any message from Jim until you'd become Virginia's guest—put me all out of tune with you?" I asked earnestly.

"I see that you are a jealous white lilac—more perhaps like the thorny red rose," laughed Rosa. "Well, that make it more interesting—not?"

More Interesting

"Make what more interesting?" I asked, hating myself for my naivette after I'd spoken.

"Oh—everything" replied Rosa, waving her hand largely. "And now I tell you why it is that I have taken the liberty to send out your faithful Miss May. It is because I am wishing to have you come to lunch again with Manuelo and me, and another of our friends. So I stay here to keep your office from being empty, and now so soon the little Miss May arrives, and I think it will be soon, we shall be free to go and keep the engagement I have made for us. Not?"

"I can't go," I cried. "Truly, I appreciate your wanting me and I'd be happy to come, but I wasted the whole morning and my business must have first claim on me for the rest of the day."

"Your business—has it more claim on you than Jaime?" demanded Rosa.

"You know it hasn't," I replied quietly.

"I do not know. You Americans are so very funny that I cannot tell what it is you are wanting. If it is to love or to succeed or to have many admirers and no husband and home or what it is, I cannot say. Sometimes I think it is maybe only to have more pearls and motors than has any other women you know. With you I think it is to have more pride than anyone else and to make always things for yourself."

"You are a very clever diagnostician of this period in the world's history," I smiled. "And you have a caustic wit as applied to your fellow women. It's good to hear things like those you've just said. They—as we say—haul a fellow up."

Rosa threw back her head and trilled out in laughter.

TUT AND ASTRONOMY

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest.

THE astronomical relations of the discoveries now going on in the royal tomb-valley of ancient Egypt are not much spoken of, although they are among the most interesting things connected with the subject.

It happened that the pharaoh, Tutankhamen, whose gorgeous tomb ornaments and decorations are now coming to light after more than 3,000 years of hiding under the Theban hills, reigned over Egypt at a most interesting moment, a moment when a religious revolution, or counter revolution, was under way.

His predecessor, Akhenaten, had thrown out the old god, Amen-Ra. Now, Ra was the ancient sun-god of the priests, and Amen, or Amon, was originally a mere local god when he gradually rose in the religious system until the priests united him with the sun-god under the combined name of Amen-Ra, and the gigantic temple of Karnak was erected in his honor, probably about 3,700 years ago.

Now, the astronomer, Norman Lockyer made out a strong case for the theory that all temples were oriented, i. e., "faced," with reference to the sun or certain stars when they were either rising or setting. The object was to conduct a ray of light from the sun or the star as the case might be, through a long series of architectural settings, to the "holy of holies," where it fell suddenly upon the face of the statue of the particular god to whom the temple was dedicated, and whose representative in the heavens sent a ray of light used by the priests in the manner just described.

Amen-Ra's temple was oriented toward the place of sunrise at the Summer solstice, i. e. the day on which the sun attains its greatest northern declination. On that day only a beam from the sun just as it rose from the horizon could traverse the long series of passages prepared for it in the construction of the temple and illuminate for a minute the face of the god on the altar in the midst of the dark sanctuary, but within sight of the throng of worshipers in the vast temple.

But, owing to an astronomical fact unknown to the builders of the great temple, the precise point where the sun rises at the Summer solstice undergoes a very slow change caused by variation of the obliquity of the ecliptic.

Mr. Lockyer found that during the centuries since the temple had ceased to be used the place of solstitial sunrise had so far shifted that on the critical day the ray of light no longer followed the temple axis.

All he had to do, then, was to calculate from astronomical data the time when the obliquity of the ecliptic would exactly correspond with the place of sunrise indicated by the direction of the temple's axis. This proved to be 3700 years B. C., from which he concluded that that was probably the date of the first building of the temple.

In the case of the many temples oriented to conspicuous stars the successors of the first builders often had to change the direction of the axes because the rising and setting places of the stars alter quite rapidly in consequence of the precession of the equinoxes of which the ancient gods seem to have neglected to give warning to the priests.

WAITING FOR FORTUNE

THOSE WHO EXPECT SOMETHING

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as Authority on the Problems of Girls

"IF only something would happen — anything — just so it's something to vary this terrible monotony."

Who hasn't said this?

Who hasn't felt at some stage of his existence that life was so dull and uneventful and barren that even an earthquake would be welcome for the change that its upheaval would make things more interesting than they were at the moment?

The selfish discontent that causes this point of view has nothing constructive — nothing helpful — nothing sturdy in its chemistry. The sort of discontent which is primarily with self makes for growth and struggle—for unfolding of personality and gifts. But the discontent that merely longs for excitement—for the "bonne chance" which may come along any moment — has nothing valuable in its chemistry for it doubts the thing for which it most longs.

"Nothing pleasant ever happens to me," writes Augusta. "I see folks all around me having the nicest kind of adventures. They get invitations and presents and promotions and things right out of a clear sky. But I have to work and strive for everything I get—and that isn't much. Do you blame me for feeling unhappy and not quite seeing why something nice can't happen to me?"

Life doesn't cuddle her real favorites. Sometimes it seems as if the "lucky folks" were the ones to whom all things come without effort on their part. But that is not the truth.

The real "lucky ones" of life are those who learn to use the powers which are theirs if they will but develop them. There is no greater good fortune for most of us than the adversity which teaches us to go beneath the surface and find out of what we really are capable.

All our turmoil and confusion of planning may go astray. The things for which we longed may not be attainable. But the discipline of disappointment, the training through frustration of our erroneous plans will lead us to a deeper wisdom and a greater peace within than any surface satisfaction could ever have given.

The affliction which cuts a young athlete off from competing in his favorite games may be the actual beginning of the opening of his mind to things far more important than anything he ever before knew. The disappointment in friendship which hurts tragically may lead to a real understanding of what loyal friendship can mean.

The failure to obtain a promotion, the miscarrying of any plan, may, like a seemingly tragic loss of health—lead to such deep and basic understanding of life that happiness will flood in as you have never dreamed it could come.

TELL THESE AT DINNER

"Will you take a little wine?" asked Miss Cutt, of Mr. Borem, at the dinner party.

"No, thank you, Miss Cutt," replied the gentleman majestically.

"Do you not drink wine?" asked Miss Cutt.

"No madam," replied Mr. Borem in his best platform manner. "I am opposed to all intoxicating liquors. Yet I believe that liquor rightly used, is a benefit to humanity. I am fully convinced that brandy was once the means of saving my life."

"Perhaps it did," responded Miss Cutt; "but I fail to see how that proves it is a benefit to humanity!"

THE ENEMIES OF WOMEN By BLASCO IBANEZ

Start Here Today This Engrossing Story of Life and Love from the Master Pen of One of the World's Greatest Novelists

THE STORY TO D'TE

Prince Michael Fedor, a Russian of fabulous wealth, is at Monte Carlo while the great war is on. With him is his friend, Atilio Castro, and other acquaintances. The prince, on returning to Villa Sirena, finds everything changed owing to the war. He announces, to the amazement of his hearers, that he is ruined. Castro smilingly remarks that he would be content with one-tenth of the remains. The Prince proposes that Castro and a few of their friends live together with the proviso that no women shall enter their lives. They will be known as "The Enemies of Women." Castro tells the Prince he has seen the Duchess de Delille. The Prince says he will not receive her. The story reverts to the marriage of the Prince's father and mother and the son's early raining. His father dies and his mother marries again. He hears his income will be cut off on account of the war, so he sells his yacht and retires to his villa at Monte Carlo. He gathers his "Enemies of Women" around him, but they spend most of the time at the casino gambling.

By Vicente Blasco Ibanez,
Author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and Other Novels of World Renown

WHEN the concert was over, Prince Michael, afraid of being stopped by certain former women friends, who had observed him in the audience, left hurriedly. He crossed the portico brusquely, elbowing his way through the crowd that barred the way. Here his attention was caught by a person of majestic bearing and excessively showy appearance, with a derby of smooth gray silk, a honey-colored overcoat, with velvet sleeves of the same shade, and white gloves and shoes.

"I thought it was at least a Russian general or an Austrian Prince dressed for Winter, and here it's only you, my dear Colonel. I hadn't caught you outside of Villa-Sirena before."

Toledo blushed, not knowing whether to feel proud or annoyed at these words.

The Duchess de Delille

"Your Excellency, I have always liked to dress well, and——"

"Who was the lady you were talking with?"

He had only seen her from behind, but she attracted his attention for the moment because of her svelte figure and her queenly carriage.

"Your Excellency," said Don Marcos stammering, as though the Prince had found him doing something that needed apology, "it was the Duchess de Delille."

That was enough: Michael did not want to hear anything about Alicia. And he turned to Castro, who ... had also seen near the entrance to the Casino talking to a lady.

"And I saw you, too," retorted Castro; "but you were in such a rush, going along with your head down, making your way like a mad bull. You really want to know who the lady was? Does she interest you?"

Lubimoff shrugged his shoulders. The unknown woman was tall and blond, with an air of lithe strength and freedom of movement, like a gymnast or an Amazon.

"Well, that's the 'Generaless,'" Castro continued. "The title isn't to be taken seriously. It's a pet name that the Duchess Alicia invented. I warn you the two are very good friends.

"They call her the "Generaless' because of her somewhat masculine character, and the brusque way she has of treating people at times. An extraordinary woman! A real Amazon. She shoots does gymnastics, swims in the rivers in mid-Winter, and, what's more, she has a voice like the sighing of the breeze, and looks as though she might faint at the least emotion, like a timid child."

"Clorinda is a South American," Castro continued, "from a little republic where her grandfathers and great grandfathers were presidents and fighters and fathers of their country. So her title of 'Generaless' has a sort of foundation. Over there in her native land they admire her for her beauty and for the great sensation she is supposed to have caused in Europe.

"Her picture is public property and figures on all the packages of coffee and every prospectus in the country. She is a national beauty, and when she gets old there will always be a spot in the world where she will be considered eternally youthful."

He remained silent for a moment.

"But she has such queer ideas! She is so used to dominating! Do you know what she asked me the first thing? Why I wasn't in the war. It didn't make any difference when I told her that I'm a neutral and that the war doesn't interest me.

"'If I were a man I would be a soldier,' she answered. And if you had only seen the look she gave me when she said it!"

Lubimoff smiled a bit scornfully at the woman's words.

"Does her opinion really worry you?" he asked.

Atilio paused for a moment, as though to weigh his words before replying.

"Yes, it does bother me," he resolutely answered at last. "Why should I deny it? That woman interests me. When I don't see her I forget all about her. But as soon as I meet her she dominates me. I want her. But she is so different from the others."

The Prince smiled, as though a self-evident truth had just been completely demonstrated. Woman! That Clorinda, that devil of a Generaless, was a real woman, who with a few short minutes of conversation only had turned Castro topsy-turvy, and perhaps would end by breaking up the peaceful life that the guests of Villa-Sirena were leading.

"And you, Atilio," he said in a reproachful voice, "are moved by that smooth-faced virago. You believe in love like a schoolboy."

Castro replied in a cold, aggressive tone. The Prince might say whatever he liked about him; but to call her a virago! What right had he? Nevertheless, he hid the real cause of his annoyance, pretending to be hurt by the allusion to his credulity.

A Non-Believer.

"I don't believe in anything; I'm more skeptical than you, perhaps. I know that everything about us is false, and conventional; lies that we accept, but they are necessary to us for the moment. You love music and painting as though they were something divine and eternal. Very well; if the structure of our ears were to be modified a little, the symphonies of Beethoven would be a regular senseless din; if the functioning of our retinas were to change, we would have to burn all the famous pictures, because they would seem like so many canvases dirtied by child's play; if our brains were to be only slightly modified, all the poets and thinkers would be childish idiots. No, I don't believe in anything," he insisted angrily.

The Prince shrugged his shoulders, giving him a look of surprise. Why all this, apropos of a woman?

"Everything is a lie," Castro went on, hotly, "but that is no reason why I should live like a stone or a tree. I need sweet falsehoods to sing my mind to sleep until the hour of my death. Illusions are a lie, but I want them near me; hope is another lie, but I want it to walk before me. I don't believe in anything. Everything you say against it I have known for years, but should I give it a kick if it comes my way, and wants to go with me? Do you know any dream that fills the emptiness of our lives better—even though it only lasts a short time?"

And now there was a look of pity in the eyes of the Prince. "He is mad," it seemed to say.

"But what do you find in love?" Michael insisted. "For I think you know what love really is. All the illusions of youths and all the idealism of the poets are merely winding paths that lead to the same, the only goal; the physical act. And aren't you tired of it? Aren't you ever overcome by the monotony of it?"

A Gloomy Intonation.

There was a certain gloomy intonation in the Prince's voice, as though he were lamenting on the ruins of his whole life. He met hundreds of women of the sort that cause a sudden burst of mute desire as they pass. Feminine resistance was more or less unknown to him. More than that: most had sought him, coming halfway of their own free will, pursuing him with little regard for the conventions and modesty. And they were all alike!

DAILY HOROSCOPE
Mary Blake Says:

Today Lucky for the DARING

TODAY, if your nativity was under the influence of Pisces, is a day especially suitable for the commencement of any new business enterprise, or for the development of progressive measures.

This does not mean to imply that speculation will prove remunerative, but it does signify that any sound financial project, if launched today, will meet with all the success it deserves.

Any steps taken today having in view the betterment of mankind, or a better understanding between Capital and Labor, will bring about the deserved result.

Do not be afraid today; do not look with too critical eye on the weaknesses of others; be tolerant, always remembering that everything, including a big drum, has two sides to it.

Do not be looking for the mote in your neighbor's eye, whilst overlooking the beam in your own.

Be big and generous, resisting at all times, the desire you will have for riotous living.

The signs indicate that today would be an auspicious one to ask the girl of your choice to be your wife, and that girl would make no mistake in uttering the word "Yes."

It is also a favorable day on which to marry, as the signs indicate that a marriage celebrated today will only bring happiness and contentment in its train.

ROYAL ROMANCES
NAPOLEON AND COUNTESS WALEWSKA

By Barbara Bayne.

NAPOLEON, at the moment his troops entered the gates of Warsaw in November 1806, was a super-man, in the full vigor of thirty-seven, and intoxicated with power. The glamor of his personality moved to adoration the stricken people of Poland, for had the conqueror not come to free them from the iron grasp of Russia?

They called him the "Liberator," and the heart of every woman among them upon whom he turned to gaze must have skipped a beat or two. But among the Polish beauties the Greuze-like little Countess Marie Walewska drew the Emperor like a lode star. He expressed a wish to know her, and at a grand ball Talleyrand, his chamberlain, arranged an introduction.

At parting, Napoleon shook hands with her, and knowing ones wagged their heads. It was tantamount to an appointment. Talleyrand, the indispensable, managed that too.

Countess Marie was only twenty-two, dazzlingly fair, with piquant features, blond hair, great blue eyes, dainty and graceful. And Napoleon plunged headlong into the affair d'amour with all the abandon that had characterized his infatuation for Josephine.

But the girlish wife of the decrepit old nobleman was not so easily won even by a man of Napoleon's fame. Then a certain court intrigante gently hinted that "where the hearts of monarchs were concerned there are limits to the nonsense Providence would stand."

And thereafter, in his eighty-odd letters to Josephine Napoleon adopted the beautiful theory that a falsehood is simply an intellectual means of meeting a domestic difficulty.

When Napoleon went to Paris, the Countess returned to her husband's castle, where a son was born May 4, 1810, which bore a striking resemblance to Napoleon. Soon the mother and infant journeyed to Paris, but she scorned the place that society would have granted her as the sultana of the great emperor. She lived a simple, secluded life and though openly acknowledged by Napoleon, there was no scandal.

The knowledge that Napoleon had a son whom he idolized must have added to the bitterness of Josephine in her final struggle to hold her place beside him.

On that black night at Fontainebleau in April, 1814, when he abdicated the throne of France, it was not Josephine, it was not Marie Louise, the second empress, who waited anxiously in an anteroom—watching over his despair. It was the little Polish Countess who sprang forward in time to knock the fatal draft from his hand, pillow his head against her heart and comfort him.

It was she, with her sunny-haired little son of four who visited the dethroned emperor in his exile at Elba.

Of all who had benefitted by Napoleon's generosity and favor, only one woman's heart remained loyal and true—the Greuze-like girl of Moscow.

FURNITURE IN HOME
—By Marian Moore—

IT sounds like an Arabian Nights tale to think of sitting in one's own easy chair, in the soft glow of one's own favorite lamp, listening to a singer a thousand miles away. Yet this picture, combining lamp, chair and radio cabinet, proves it can be done!

Radio cabinets like the one at the right are being placed in rooms where ordinary "sets," with their dials and buttons, seem a trifle inharmonious, and now the bedtime stories, etc., may be heard through a cabinet in harmony with the furniture of any period.

Music, Light and Comfort.

The easy chair in the photograph shows Chippendale motifs, with modern adaptations, and is upholstered with velour in a pleasing pattern. The lamp has a polychrome base with an octagonal parchment shade, on which plain panels alternate with others showing a flower-encircled Grecian vase.

(Write to Marian Moore, care of this newspaper, for advice or information about home furnishing or decorating, sending stamped, addressed envelope for reply.)

Question: Are grandfathers' clocks being manufactured now? Where can they be obtained? What is the price?—Y. E. W.

Answer: Grandfathers' clocks, or Colonial clocks, are being manufactured in America at the present time. They come in a variety of styles and the price depends upon the amount of ornamentation and the "accessories," such as chimes, etc. They may be obtained from any furniture dealer.

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"If the hill will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet will go to the hill."

Lord Bacon in his essay on "Boldness" repeats the story of Mahomet's promise to his followers that on a given day he would move by his word a nearby hill. When the day came, Mahomet ordered the hill to move, but it did not move. Then Mahomet calmly announced he would go to the hill since it would not come to him. Bacon uses the incident as an example of boldness.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES
Be Sure to Read Them to Your Children

By Blanche Silver

THE HAPPY LITTLE MOTHER

"WELL, of all things!" exclaimed Mrs. Jenny Wren, as she balanced herself on a twig above Mrs. Bluebird's house. "You don't mean you are laying again, do you? Why, I never heard of such a thing. What's the occasion?"

"Nothing at all," chirped the happy little bluebird mother. "I just want a big family."

"Oh, you foolish thing!" snapped Mrs. Jenny Wren. "I don't mind doing my duty, but I should never consent to raising two broods at the same time. No, indeed! I think too much of a good time. I like traveling and a jolly time too much to spend all my days on a nest."

"Every one to her own way of thinking," chirped Mrs. Bluebird, merrily. "This will make my third hatching this season."

"What? Third hatching!" exclaimed Mrs. Jenny Wren, excitedly. "Why, Mrs. Bluebird, you don't mean it. I'm surprised. You must love a large family. How many eggs do you lay each time?"

"Up to this time I've had five eggs at a setting," replied her neighbor. "But this time I laid six little eggs in my nest. I just thought one more wouldn't add much to my worries."

"Six more. Gracious me! Did I ever!" chuckled Mrs. Jenny Wren. "You can take care of them if you want to—but not me!

I didn't even want a home this year, but Daddy Wren insisted, so I did build a nest up in the hole in the pole on the road yonder. But, dear me, I couldn't think of wasting any more time setting. One brood is enough for me.

"My! I wouldn't be troubled with so many children hanging around. When my children get big enough to fly, I send them out to take care of themselves. How can you take car of them all day long when you're sitting on these eggs?"

"Easily enough!" laughed Mrs. Bluebird merrily. "My husband takes care of the older ones while I'm busy with the younger babies. In that way we keep our children who are about the same size, together. And then they never quarrel or fuss like most large families."

"Fuss!" chirped Mrs. Jenny Wren. 'My goodness! That's all my children do from morning until night—fuss, fuss, fuss all the time."

Just then there was a loud cry heard and Mrs. Jenny Wren hurried home. Her children were all fighting over a worm one of them had found in the garden. My!

"You Don't Mean It!"

Such a time as they had! Mrs. Bluebird could hear it all from her nest and she shook her head sadly.

"Too bad!" she sighed. "But one cannot expect to have happy children unless the mother bird is happy, too."

And she cuddled her little pale blue eggs closer under her breast and smiled as Daddy Bluebird, surrounded by some of their little ones, returned with a lovely, juicy worm for her.

Mrs. Bluebird was ... proud of her family and she shook her head when she thought of her discontented little neighbor.

WHEN DID IT HAPPEN?

1—When was the island of Jamaica discovered?

2—When was the Congo Free State annexed to Belgium?

3—When was the second largest diamond in the world discovered?

4—When was the "open door" policy inaugurated in China?

5—When were justices of the peace first appointed?

ANSWERS
To Yesterday's Questions

1—A mutiny of the sailors of the British took place at Nore in May and June, 1776, but was forcibly suppressed.

2—Rome, according to tradition, was founded in 753 B. C. by Romulus.

3—Colorado was admitted to the Union in 1876.

4—The Continental Congress adopted the Articles of Confederation in 1777.

5—The Ionian War, between the Persians and Ionians, took place 501-42 B. C.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

A fork should never be stuck into a steak or chop when frying or grilling, as it lets the juice out.

To remove fat from hot soup pour the soup through a cloth that has been saturated in cold water.

When boiling a ham leave it in the water in which it has been boiled until quite cold. This will make it juicy and tender.

A little mustard well rubbed into the hands after peeling onions will remove the odor.

Tartaric acid is most effective in removing stains made by permanganate of potash; it also removes fruit stains.

CASCARETS 10¢

Best Cathartic for Headache, Colds, Sour Stomach, Gases, Biliousness

Clean your liver and bowels! Enjoy the nicest gentlest bowel cleansing you ever experienced by taking one or two candy-like Cascarets tonight. They physic your bowels fully. All the constipated waste and sour bile will move out of the bowels without griping or stirring you up. There will be no bowel poison to cause colds, sick headache, dizziness, biliousness or sour stomach when you wake up in the morning. More men, women and children take Cascarets for the liver and bowels than all other laxative-cathartics combined. 10 cent boxes, also 25 and 50 cent sizes. Any drug store.

HOW TO KEEP FIT AT 72

Sprightly Old Man Reveals the Secret

"I am 72 years old, and much more vigorous and active than most men of my age. I know that my excellent condition is due to the fact that I take two or three doses of Wincarnis every day, because I never felt as well before I began taking it. I used to tire very quickly and suffer from wakefulness and had to bundle myself up whenever it was damp or drafty. But since I began taking Wincarnis I have had the energy and endurance of a middle-aged man, sleep soundly and withstand the severest of weather. I have noticed that Wincarnis keeps my appetite keen and that it strengthens my nerves and heart. If my fingers tremble and my heart flutters or I feel symptoms of depression or weakness, a dose of Wincarnis gives me relief within a few minutes."

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Schwab, so the story goes, met one of his workmen friends in the Bethlehem Steel Plant one day and, noticing that he was somewhat bedraggled, asked him what had happened. The workman, a Dutchman, explained that some of the younger fellows had got hold of him and had given him a rather rough ducking. "What did you do?"

"I jus' laff," was the reply.

* * *

My mind reverted to this Dutchman the other day. Every member of my family was sick, the trained nurse in charge was suddenly called away to attend a dying relative, and neither doctor nor anyone else could find another nurse near or far. I was having a merry time with an abscess which was revealed on pulling a tooth, and the dentist had cheerfully informed me that the condition was so bad that it might turn into tuberculosis of the bone. The weather was near the zero point, we hadn't many shovelfuls of coal in the cellar, and our coal dealer repeatedly informed us that there wasn't any coal available in the town. It so happened that the deluge of "kicks" coming in from readers was approaching record-breaking volume.

* * *

I did not resort to Coueism, but I did recall and repeat that, the man worth while is the man who can smile when everything is going to the dogs.

* * *

And, lo! a modest supply of coal came in the nick of time; all the patients made a gratifyingly rapid recovery; I am still toothless but, I hope, tuberculosisless; and the bouquets from readers are again outnumbering the cabbages.

And—let me whisper it—I'm heading for a little visit southwards.

* * *

If there is any one thing my burrowing into the careers of notable successful business men has taught me, it is the importance of being game, the importance of displaying backbone rather than the white feather. I could fill column after column, straight from my memory, of concrete cases of gameness exhibited by men who finally succeeded in reaching the top.

Would a few interest you?

* * *

Woolworth's first store failed. So did three out of the first five that he opened; but he did not give way to despair. He was game.

George Eastman's business collapsed totally not very long after he had founded it. For some unknown reason his formula for making photographic plates suddenly ceased to work, and he was compelled to stop operations. In two weeks his hair turned white. But not his liver. He exhibited extreme resourcefulness and gameness and won out.

* * *

Edison went hungry many times before he became famous. At one time things were so black with him, after he had embarked in business for himself, that he remarked to his trusted lieutenant, Samuel Insull, that if the worst came to the worst he could at least get a job as a telegraph operator at enough salary to meet all his requirements.

* * *

H. P. Davison's career was shaped by an act of gameness, which, widely recorded and applauded in the newspapers, attracted the attention of financiers to him when, as a young man, he kept his head when a madman presented a pistol at his head and demanded that he cash a huge check signed by The Almighty.

* * *

Alexander Graham Bell suffered the usual fate of inventors, and even after Theodore N. Vail, a sternly practical business man, joined him, the going was extremely rough for several years—so much so that there were times when there was nothing to put into their envelopes, with the consequences that money had to be borrowed for meals.

Edward L. Doheny's resources were swept away several times, not only in his youth, but after he reached middle age. But he was game, and now he is one of the most successful oil kings America has ever produced.

* * *

The careers of such men as Minor C. Keith, of United Fruit fame; John Hays Hammond, the famous mining engineer; Robert Dollar, the ex-lumber jack, are full of thrills and adventures equalling the wildest imaginings of fiction writers.

* * *

Summing it all up in one sentence:

To get there, be game.

COTTON RISES TO NEW HIGH RECORD

By BROADAN WALL.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Registered U. S. Patent Office

New York, Feb. 22.—The reason for the hesitancy shown the last three days in some departments of the stock market came to light after the close yesterday when the Federal Reserve Bank of New York announced an increase in its rediscount rate from 4 to 4½ per cent. This action also explains the difference of opinion in some important places recently as to whether the general stock market was headed upward for the immediate future. The change in the rediscount rate brings it up to the level prevailing for prime commercial paper.

The stock market showed a strong undertone most of the day. The industrial average moved into new high ground and quite a number of specialties touched new top quotations. Cotton rose to a new high record for the season, May selling at 29.48 cents per pound. Raw sugar quotations were higher. Copper metal sales were announced at the new top figure of 16¼ cents per pound and zinc was marked up $1 a ton.

One gratifying development was the broadening of the demand for the high priced railroad shares, particularly Louisville & Nashville, which closed with a net rise of four points and Atlantic Coast Line which rose two.

Strength in the sugar market is resulting from buying for the account of England and domestic speculation which has stimulated the demand for both raw and refined. Sugar producing companies are expected to do an unusually profitable business this year and this accounts for the broadening of speculation in those shares and higher prices.

The bond market was generally strong.

JAIL PENALTY FIXED IN NEW DRUG LAW

Washington, Feb. 22.—The Porter resolution proposing diplomatic negotiations to limit the production of habit-forming narcotic drugs to the minimum medicinal requirements was formally reported to the House by its author, Chairman Porter, of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Chairman Porter.

Chairman Porter introduced a bill providing for a minimum penalty of five years in prison and a fine up to $5,000 for first violations of the anti-narcotic laws and a mandatory prison sentence of fifteen years for further offenses. The bill also would suspend the parole laws in cases of drug pedlars.

This action of the House Committee follows the unanimous vote of the committee last Saturday, ordering it laid before the House with the recommendation that it be passed promptly. In his report accompanying the measure, Chairman Porter says, in part:

"The testimony (taken at exhaustive hearings) indicates that the growth of raw materials from which these drugs are obtained is enormously in excess of the quantity that would be required if the production were restricted exclusively to the amount required for strictly medicinal and scientific purposes.

"Your commitee is firmly convinced that the only effective and permanent remedy for the eradication of the evil traffic in these drugs is to be obtained by the concurrence of the producing countries in the urgent request of the President of the United States, in behalf of the moral and physical welfare of our people, to restrict and limit the growth and production of habit-forming drug plants to the extent necessary to fulfill the needs exclusively required for strictly medicinal and scientific purposes.

"The failure of international conferences adequately to deal with the drug menace, because such conferences can agree only by compromise, was pointed out by the report.

Chairman Porter appended to the report a letter received today from Secretary of Labor Davis, voicing his vigorous approval of the resolution.

Mexican Crime and Disease Laid to Dope

By JULIO TRENS.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Mexico City, Feb. 22.—Dr Ricardo Catureglio, head of the drug department of the national board of health of Mexico, in an interview with Universal Service today, declared "The drug evil is today the greatest concern of the health authorities in our country.

"The lower classes are accustomed to secretly consume a pernicious weed known as marihuana. The crimes committed in the higher social strata are always due to this toxic.

"During Mexico's revolutionary period the authorities did not notice that Europe was introducing into the country large supplies of cocaine, morphine and opium, greatly exceeding the medical requirements.

"At the dawn of internal peace an uninterrupted series of crimes and disease brought home the fact that these drugs were not only being consumed by the lower classes, but that the European products were being also immoderately consumed by the upper classes of society.

"President Obregon, upon assuming the Presidency, promptly instructed the Department of Public Health to issue the necessary orders to check this evil."

20 MORE COASTERS HURT IN FALL RIVER

Fall River, Feb. 22.—With twenty more coasters injured in collisions with automobiles throughout the city, the list of victims for the week has reached thirty-four.

Those seriously injured as the result of the latest accidents are Leyton Terry, fourteen years old, No. 103 Dyer street, and Harry Sandler, eleven years of age, No. 922 South Main street.

STILL EXPLOSION SETS HOUSE AFIRE

Pawtucket, R. I., Feb. 22.—The explosion of a still set afire a tenement house owned by Joseph Bento of No. 37 Hurley avenue. The firemen discovered a well-equipped distillery. Bento was arrested and will be charged with possessing liquor illegally. Flames damaged the house to the extent of $1,000.

JANITORS BLAMED FOR NOT RAISING FLAGS

Lincoln, R. I., Feb. 22.—Answering the criticism of American Legion members against the School Board for not displaying flags on all school buildings Lincoln's Birthday, Superintendent John L. Smith asserts that the omission was due to the failure of janitors to obey instructions issued by him.

SCHWAB WARNS U. S. TO KEEP OUT OF EUROPE

By JOHN T. BURKE,
Special Wireless to Universal Service.

London, Feb. 22. — "The biggest business men of America, with whom I have had many conversations and conferences, unite in the belief that the time is not ripe for intervention by the United States in order to readjust the deplorable conditions in Europe.

Chas. M. Schwab.

"While America is willing to loan billions, if need be, to restore the business equilibrium of the world, under no circumstances will the people of the United States consent to being dragged into the political maelstrom of Europe."

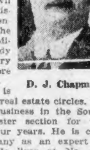

In these words Charles M. Schwab, at the American embassy, discussed world affairs, with Ambassador Harvey not expressing any opinions but assisting in the process of interviewing Mr. Schwab.

"I believe," continued Mr. Schwab, "that if France would agree to the appointment of an international commission composed of the greatest figures in the business world to settle the reperations question on a strictly business basis, making Germany pay to the last degree of its power to the Allies, the whole situation would be cleared up as speedily and as satisfactorily as the settlement of the British debt to America."

Mr. Schwab is depressed at the sight of the misery born of unemployment here, and emphasized the fact that while America is exceedingly prosperous and the outlook is the brightest, her railroads are in deplorable condition and her farmers and manufacturers need labor.

CURLEY NAMES CHAPMAN AS COMMISSIONER

Daniel J. Chapman, former State representative and senator from the South Boston-Dorchester district, has been appointed street commissioner by Mayor Curley.

D. J. Chapman

Chapman makes the third candidate that the Mayor has sent to the Civil Service Commission for confirmation. The two others, Michael J. Reidy and P. Harry Jennings, were not confirmed.

Chapman is well known in real estate circles. He has been in business in the South Boston-Dorchester section for the past twenty-four years. He is considered by many as an expert in valuations. He lives at No. 613 Dorchester avenue, South Boston.

HIGH FISH PRICE DUE TO LURE OF RUM RUNNING

New York, Feb. 22.—The turning of fishermen from their regular occupation to rum running is the chief reason fish are costing more this Lenten season than for fifteen years, said a veteran salesman in Fulton Fish Market today.

The soft breezes and big profits of the Bahamas are luring seamen from the hard work and scanty returns of the Grand Banks.

Fish brought these wholesale prices in Fulton Market today:

	Price per lb.	Nor'l price
Cod	26c@28c	18½c
Haddock	15c	6c@7c
Halibut	25c@27c	20c
Smelts	28c@35c	18c
Shad Roe	65c@75c	35c

Daily receipts of fish are estimated to be only little more than half than at this time last year. Bad weather and Lenten season earlier than in 1922 are contributing causes of the high prices. But the underlying cause is that fewer schooners are in the fishing trade, and even these have difficulty in getting crews.

MICHAEL S. O'BRIEN, PAWTUCKET, DIES

Pawtucket, R. I., Feb. 22.—Michael S. O'Brien, sixty-five years old, one of this city's most picturesque characters, is dead at the Memorial Hospital. He amassed a fortune in real estate investments. He was the founder of the Novelty Park Club and other social organizations.

Showing the Way

The Biggest American's Birthday

They All Look Big Close By, but Washington Was the REAL Big One

Lincoln was a very great man. In goodness, courage, modesty, patience no man could be greater. There are other great men scattered along through our history. The two greatest, undoubtedly, are Lincoln and Washington. Between them it is hard to decide, however. If there had been no Washington to establish this country, Lincoln could not have preserved it.

History perhaps will say that Washington up to now is greatest of all Americans.

The decision wouldn't disturb Lincoln. His object was to be useful, not to be great.

It will do no harm to review a few facts in the career of our biggest big man, whose birthday we celebrate. A majority celebrate it in the usual unusual, inappropriate way, BY DOING NOTHING. Some might make an exception to the "doing nothing" by thinking for four or five minutes about the man to whose birth we owe the holiday.

You discover at the start that Washington was a fighter. But begin at the beginning.

One hundred and ninety-one years ago Mary Ball Washington was about to become a mother for the first time. Five hundred times she had said to Augustine Washington, her husband, "I hope it will be a boy." And five hundred times he had said kindly, but calmly, having been through the same experience four times with his first wife, "Of course it will, Mary; don't worry."

Luckily for us, it was a boy, and the boy was George Washington.

He was different from many of today's "great men," for he was first of all a fighting man. When he was a young boy he wrote neatly in his copybook:

"Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience." But that was not his own composition. When he had finished that he went out and thrashed all the boys he could get hold of. He played soldier and made them let him be captain. He wrestled, fought, raced and indicated in various ways that he was ready for trouble.

When he was fourteen his mother found it very hard to keep him from enlisting in the militia.

When still a mere boy, at the Monongahela, he had four bullet holes through his coat and two horses shot under him. This was fighting. But he did not spend the remainder of his days preaching against the horrors of war. He was ready for it with Indians, with Englishmen, with Frenchmen or any other sort of men that needed a beating—and they got it from him whenever they felt that they needed it.

For fourteen or fifteen years he lived peacefully as a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses. He had plenty of money and plenty of opportunity to cultivate a fine, aristocratic horror for war. But the love of fight was alive in him all the time. When he heard in '73 of the outrageous sufferings in Boston he did not suggest mildness and a careful investigation. He did not say that it "took more courage to wait than to fight"—a favorite remark with modern heroes. He said: "I will raise a thousand men, subsist them at my own expense, and march with them at their head, for the relief of Boston."

Vulgar, common and quarrelsome, wasn't it? But it's just what he said.

This quarrelsome Washington was positively delighted with the Declaration of Independence.

Without any hesitation he undertook to whip England with an army of about fourteen thousand soldiers and about twenty-five hundred straggling, unarmed men. His soldiers had just nine cartridges each, and England at that time had twenty-four thousand troops in this country, unlimited ammunition and all England in reserve to call upon.

Well, Washington made England give up a good many million dollars' worth of American real estate—which she will never get back—and still he was not tired of fighting. Frederick the Great sent him his portrait—"From the Oldest General in Europe to the Greatest General in the World."

Even that did not make Washington feel that the time had come to stop. When he was sixty-two years old he heard of uprisings in Pennsylvania against a liquor tax. He was ready to start at the head of the militia just as quickly as he could pull on his white buckskin breeches. But the uprising decided to quit.

When he was sixty-four years old he accepted the command of all the troops raised or to be raised in the United States; and he was ready at a word to fight France as he had fought England. He could easily have suggested peaceful talk, since France had been so useful to us.

But his motto was, "If anybody wants trouble, let him apply to the United States, and he can have it in doses to suit."

When the time came to die he gave death a fight. He said, "I die hard, but I'm not afraid to go." When death had finally won he knew it and he still showed grit. He said to his doctors: "I feel myself going; I pray you take no more trouble about me."

He set an example living, and he set an example dying, and he will set an example as long as men are men—it is a fighting example.

He was first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen because he was first in war.

When he was dead and gone to a heaven where cowards—if admitted—certainly take second place, Napoleon bound all his flags and standards with crepe for ten days, and the ships of England—those that he had not sent to the bottom of the sea—put their flags at half mast.

That was an American. If he were alive now, he would be called a social disturber, a lawless exciter.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

WHAT'S THE USE?

By Bruno Lessing

HAVE you ever seen one of those automatic cigar clippers which cut off the tip the moment the cigar is pressed down on it? The very act of pressure releases an invisible spring inside, which in turn instantly flashes a blade across the opening.

Well, in a hotel lobby one day I saw a seven-year-old boy gazing in fascination at one of these instruments. I warned him against touching it.

"Oh, I could touch it quick," he said, "and pull my finger away."

"No, my son," I said, "you can't do anything of the kind. That machine is made for the purpose of cutting things before they can be pulled away."

Later in the day I found him at the same spot, his eyes glued to the cigar clipper. But now I observed that he had a bandage around one of his fingers.

"Ah, ha! You cut yourself, didn't you?" I asked. He gazed up at me with wide-open, eager eyes.

"Ye-eh," he replied, "but I'll do it quicker next time."

Have you ever been warned against gambling in stocks on margin? Have you ever read anything on the subject? Did you know that preachers and lecturers and teachers and writers and moralists and financiers have been explaining for years that it is a game exactly like this cigar cutter?

Do you not wonder what good it does to preach and rail and point out the stupidity of any form of gambling when those hurt go right on? So, I ask you, what's the use?

HighParisRents Oust 25,000

PARIS, Feb. 23.—Twenty-five thousand Parisian families who had received notices to move out January 1 have now been notified that positively the final day of grace for them will be July 1.

It is estimated that there are now about 1,100 vacant lodgings, most of which are higher priced than the ones the tenants are vacating. By July 1 it is hoped that the number of these vacant lodgings will have been increased by 50 per cent.

The reason the 25,000 families are moving is because they can not afford to pay the heavy rent increases demanded by the proprietors, who say that they are now losing money, owing to high taxation and rates.

As a solution the city will attempt to build 25,000 cheap flats, but these cannot be finished for several years.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

Should Be Removed

Editor Boston American:

As a reader of the Boston American I find Mr. Phelan, according to his own words, has broken his fourth coal commandment, and should be removed from office and given the full extent of the law.

ARTHUR P. PACKARD.
Brockton.

Did Not Break Rule

Editor Boston American:

Did James J. Phelan break his own coal rule? He certainly did not! The ones who delivered to him three tons of coal on January 24 are the ones who broke the rule. Mr. Phelan did as any ordinary human being would do when he became aware of a shortage in his coal bins, ordered or bought more. Glory be! I wish I could find the one who broke the rule to see if I could induce him to give me even three bags full. MRS. T. C. FISH.
Somerville.

Phelan Wrong

Editor Boston American:

I wish to say that Mr. J. J. Phelan had no right to get three tons of range coal on the 24th day of January, 1923, for he then had taken a two months' supply at once. I will say this, if Mr. Phelan behaved himself as he wanted others to do, he had no right to get three tons at one time. PHIL NEWELL.
Waltham.

Coal Cars Held

Editor Boston American:

If you had extended your exploration you would have found all the roads from the mines crowded with coal cars, full since last Fall, sidetracked to enable the "allied interests" to keep up the "shortage" and price. People who have come from that part of Pennsylvania tell me that all day long one rides between tracks of coal cars, loaded for Spring and Summer trade.

Melrose. E. H. JUDKINS.

Could Use Bottle

Editor Boston American:

Your question, "Did Phelan break his own coal rule?" is about as hard to answer as, "Have we had any snow this Winter?" I would like to win that hot-water bottle, and if I were successful you could tell Mr. Phelan that I would fill it with hot water, too, no thanks to him either, as I am the proud owner of an electric water heater.

SAMUEL J. GOLDEN.
Manchester, N. H.

Jury System

Editor Boston American:

Apropos of your encomium on Attorney Herbert Parker in his apology for the national jury system, I wish to register my protest. I am not foolish, as he would claim because I attack the jury system, but I assert the whole jury structure is defective and I offer a remedy. There should be paid, professional jurymen, not haphazard, picked by lot, men to be the arbiters of a man's destiny. The rank and file of the average jury are recruited from the raw and uncouth material of expediency, and a premium is placed, not on their efficiency, "but their virtual ignorance of the case at hand;" and the average juryman's chief asset is his arrogant incompetency.

Child Offers Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a little girl and have outgrown some of my clothes which I would like to give to some little girl from eight to nine years of age. If you know of somebody that is in need of clothes, please be so kind and send me the address of the family. I shall send the bundle through parcel post.

MILDRED.

ED. NOTE—You are very thoughtful. The address of one of the numerous somebodies in need of clothes will be sent you.

Bathrobe

Editor Helping Hand:

If any of the dear people would like to contribute a bathrobe, I would be very grateful and appreciate it very much. I am in bed and have been all Winter, and my income is not sufficient to buy anything outside of bare necessities. I never felt the cold so badly as this Winter. I have two rooms, and the temperature is 36 in one and 37 in the other.

MRS. C. A.

Wheel Chair Needed

Editor Helping Hand:

My son is suffering from diabetis, and is scarcely able to walk. He is twenty-three years old and weighs only fifty-six pounds. He longs to get outdoors, especially now that Spring is coming, but we cannot afford to buy him a wheel chair. Is there some kind reader who could come to our rescue? J. F. H.

Thanks for Aid

Editor Helping Hand:

Your letters received O. K. and I was sure glad to get the money, as I was able to buy a little coal and wood and some groceries with it. I have received several bags of castoff clothing that has come in right handy. The readers of the Boston American have been very kind to me.

MRS. FRANCES WATSON.

STILL NO PROSPECT OF A THAW IN THE RUHR

By Herbert Kaufman

THE Ruhr situation still frozen. And no immediate prospect of a thaw. Cuno refuses even to discuss the payment or revision of reparations until France crosses the Rhine.

France won't move a step until Germany pays the piper to date.

More arrests, disorders and usual clashes.

Poincare isn't interested in the opinions of other powers. The Ruhr, to his notion, is none of their concern.

He'll not take kindly to outside meddling, denying the authority of the League of Nations over any details of the Versailles treaty.

Lloyd George dissents, book and chapter, and pleads with Parliament to intervene.

He doesn't accept Poincare's contentions, which are inconsistent with that gentleman's own recorded interpretations.

The little Welshman is certain that Paris has engaged in a suicidal venture—a fore-destined debacle.

France, he points out, has begun to realize this. Seventeen recently held by-elections there have gone against the government—a rebuke for its extreme courses.

He hopes we won't continue in our isolation. England and America clipped the claws and bound the wings of the black eagle and are therefore obligated to save the helpless Hun from chanticleer's spurs.

Bonar Law feels much the same way, but won't intervene. Nor will the United States.

Meanwhile, in Mr. Carnegie's lovely dove cote at The Hague, a commission of jurists appointed at the Washington conference draws new war rules and wonders how they shall ever be enforced.

A Cop With a Badge and No Club

The Rail Labor Board is another group licensed to carry a gun, but not privileged to load it.

The Pennsylvania Railroad challenged Federal authority to designate the form of ballot and lay down regulations for shop elections. Whereupon the government, under the sanction of the transportation act, attempted to publish this violation of its sovereignty.

The road secured an injunction and fought the case to the Supreme Court, which now decides against the corporation, but admits that the board has no power to enforce orders.

Another national policeman with a badge and no club.

Not a "White Man"—By Court Decree

At the same sitting the Supreme Court delivers opinion that while Hindoos may be Caucasians they are not, "in the words of common speech," to be regarded as "white persons." And consequently are ineligible to citizenship.

Statutes "must be interpreted in accordance with the understanding of the common man from whose vocabulary the words are taken."

No question of "racial superiority or inferiority is involved."

China and India, the oldest existing civilizations, are now in the same boat.

Mighty and learned empires when Europe lived in wattle huts—mothers of philosophy and culture—of Confucius and Buddha—and now held unfit for assimilation with folk who neither wrote nor wove when their princes reared palaces and led panoplied armies across the known world. Sic transit omnis gloria.

When Alexander Crossed the Oxus

India cannot object to color lines. She invented them. For centuries her people have been divided by difference of complexion, as well as occupation, religion and birth.

No other country under the stars is so particular, so fanatic in regulating cominglings and marriages.

That vast population struggles in a hopelessly tangled net of prejudices and taboos. The son of a scavenger and his grandson are born and must die scavengers. A system of social infant damnation.

Democracy may not be interpreted to such folk. They cannot absorb its precious essences.

Fatalitism and ambition do not blend. Democracy is all for freedom of thought—all for independence and self-expression.

It is thoroughfare—the open road—an unhandicapped contest between equals before every opportunity—and above all, a classless estate.

Therein lies the secret of its greatness. It makes presidents out of tailors and billionaires of stationary engineers. It reaches into a log cabin and sets a rail-splitter on the throne of immortality.

If Andrew Johnson or Henry Ford or Abraham Lincoln had been Hindoos their genius would have strangled and died in the stifling cubbyholes of cast.

When Alexander crossed the Oxus he found a Gulliver, self-trussed by a million criss-crossing threads of ritual and tradition.

India is still a Gulliver—otherwise it would not be England's.

Never the Twain Should Mix

"East is East and West is West and never the Twain" should mix. None know better than Kipling the bitter failure of miscegenation.

Folk of a color belong together, white and black and yellow—each with his kind.

Japan, now so resentful against racial discrimination, long chose to be a hermit rather than cross her strain. Before Perry came, Caste ruled Nippon also.

Not until birth distinctions were officially done away with was there space in those tiny islands for present destiny.

It seems incredible to think that Alcock, the first minister plenipotentiary from Great Britain, sailing to his post as late as 1859, held the opinion that Japan was "a cluster of isles on the farthest rim of the horizon, apparently inhabited by a race grotesque and savage."

At which time the Japanese themselves were being solemnly warned against permitting a soil "sacred to the descendants of the gods to be polluted by the touch of barbarians sprung from dogs and apes."
